THE PARTY OF THE PEOPLE.

From the Meadville Tribune-Republican.

The Snyder County Tribune remarks:

"Our farmers will do well to remember that Senator Delamater received his nomination by votes cast by delegates from the rural districts. The large cities, Philadelphia and Pittsburg were against him, while his support came from the farmers of the State. Pattison was nominated by the delegates from Philadelphia and Pittsburg and by defrauding a number of delegates from the rural districts out of their seats in the Convention. The Republican platform advocates the better protection of the agriculturalist's interest by relieving the farmer of some burdensome taxation, and no intelligent farmer, who is conversant with Gov. Pattison's administration will for a moment contend that he advocated one measure that was for their relief. The farmer who is honest in his intention can secure the best interest of the farmers of the state by voting for Senator Delamater for Governor."

That the remarks of our Snyder county contemporary are true is abundantly evidenced by the rapidly increasing column of leading and influential agriculturalists rallying under the Republican banner for service during the gubernatorial campaign—regardless of past political affiliations. The occasion for this overwhelming sentiment among the thoughtful and intelligent farmers of the commonwealth can be easily accounted for on comparing the records of the two great parties of the past quarter of a century on all the vital issues the American people have been called upon to consider; and particularly is this true at the present time when the two parties are again in battle array asking to be intrusted with the control of the vast and varied interests of this great industrial state. Investigation discloses the fact that the Republican party has never made a pledge that it has failed to redeem, and while it cannot be asserted it never made a mistake it can be truthfully said, and to its everlasting credit, it has never traveled but in one direction and that direction has invariably been toward better government; toward true reform in every branch of the public service; toward every object promising greater prosperity and happiness to the American people.

Notwithstanding all that has been achieved in the past the grand old party of progress is still marching steadily forward from victory to victory—turning neither to the right or to the left and pausing not until the work in hand has been accomplished. It is this integrity of purpose, and the faithfulness with which all past promises have been redeemed that is working a mighty change in the hearts of the struggling agriculturalists, who see in the declarations of the Republican platform adopted at Harrisburg on June 25, of the present year, the sunrise of a great and permanent prosperity. There is no equivocation or attempt to deceive, on the contrary the utterances of the party are straightforward and emphatic, unequivocally promising equalization of taxation, a further contribution to the support of the common schools to be made good from taxes derived from the corporations; state aid for the improvement of the public roads, for the care of the indigent insane, for the expenses of the jury system and the cost of the holding of the general elections. For the further information of the reader we reproduce those paragraphs of the platform referring to taxation, which read as follows:

"But the depression under which our agricultural interests now suffer has made the present system of taxation bear too heavily upon them, and we therefore pledge ourselves to lighten that burden, and as far as possible to equalize taxation. To that end we recommend that the surplus revenue derived from the state taxation be used to lessen the taxation now laid upon real estate for local purposes by applying it, so far as it will in their legislative wisdom avail, to the increase of the appropriation for the support of the common schools, for the supply of text books for use therein, and to make appropriations for the improvement of the public roads, for the care of the indigent insane, for the expenses of the jury system, and of the general elections.

"If thereby there should be necessity for enlarging our surplus revenue we favor a just and equitable increase in the taxation of property of corporations.

"We recommend that the local system of taxation be so reformed as to permit the taxation of moneyed capital for local purposes to such an extent as to enable the local authorities to reduce the rate of taxation upon real estate to an equitable basis."

The above promises the relief for which agriculturists are praying; the faith of the Republican party of the commonwealth is pledged to the faithful performance of the agreement; Senator Delamater has unequivocally accepted the conditions laid down by his party and in his Chambersburg speech obligated himself to see that every promise is faithfully observed so far as lays within his power.

Is it any longer cause for wonderment that the thoughtful and intelligent grangers and farmers throughout Pennsylvania, irrespective of party, are rallying, in force to fight under the Republican banner

It is Said.

That the boy is hunting squirrels.

That postal cards are going out of use.

That the days are rapidly growing shorter.

That Rogers' circus is worth going to see.

That the highly colored show bill again appeareth.

That it looks funny to see an old man chewing gum.

That fall and winter fashions are already displayed in quantities to fascinate.

That the show or theatre that fails to advertise in the papers is not deserving and will not draw a large audience.

That the slang that comes from the mouths of pretty girls is simply disgusting and should not be indulged.

That it is not safe to snub the poor for there is no telling how soon they may become rich and be prone to retaliate.

That too many of our people take an interest in the welfare of the poor heathen in foreign lands; and have never a thought for those of their poor fellow mortals who live in their midst.

That all bicyclers should join the League of American Wheelman. It will be of advantage to them in various ways and may greatly aid in the procurement of vastly better roads throughout the county.

Death of an Old Veteran.

On Monday night about 12 o'clock Mr. Michael Faucey, died at his home at Pleasant Gap, aged about 72 years. The cause of his death was general disability occasioned by a fall received during a battle in the late war. Mr. Faucey was a member of the First Pennsylvania Cavalry and while making a charge one day his horse stumbled fell down and rolled on Mr. Faucey's leg and he has never had the right use o the injured member since. An aged wife and five children, all grown up and married, survive the deceased. Mr. Faucey was for 30 years a member of the Methodist church.

The funeral will occur on Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. Interment to be made in the Pleasant Gap cemetery. The comrades of Gregg Post are all invited to attend.

Special Train From Oak Hall.

On Saturday morning a special excursion train will be run from Oak Hall to Bellefonte to make connection with the early train west in order to convey all who desire to attend the veteran picnic at Philipsburg. The train will leave Oak Hall about 5.20. It will also be run back in the evening after the last train arrives in Bellefonte from Philipsburg. Excursion rates for the round trip.

In no other country but republican America could Labor Day be celebrated.

Only in the unity of labor and capital can the highest welfare of both be realized.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 1, 1890.

The President has been giving a great deal of attention to the condition of the Congressional Calendar, and he has become convinced that it will be impossible to dispose of the measures of national importance, not to mention those important to particular sections of the country in the time between the first Monday in December and the ourth of March 1891. At the same time, it is believed that he would prefer that Congress should adopt the resolution offered by Senator Edmunds providing for a recess from September 19, to November 10, instead of his having to call an extra session.

Senator Edmunds says he offered the resolution without conferring with his party colleagues, and because he thinks the additional time which will thereby be gained is absolutely necessary to dispose of the immense mass of business—all more or less important—with which the calendar of the Senate is loaded down. Mr. Edmunds thinks, as does every one else at all familiar with the subject, that unless those three weeks before the regular meeting in December are utilized in this manner many important measures cannot be acted upon.

The democrats are bitterly opposed to the Edmunds resoultion and some of the most hot-headed among them are already making wild threats of fillibustering against the resolution when it is called up, which may be this week or later. These gentleman have apparently forgotten that the Constitution of the United States confers the authority upon the President, in case of failure by the House and Senate to agree upon a date for adjournment to declare Congress adjourned from one date to another, in his discretion, and, that this authority will be exercised if the minority shall persist in endeavoring to defeat the will of the majority by continuous fillibustering is not for a moment to be doubted. Minorities have their rights; but tha fact should not be forgotten that the majority also has right, and that in the Senate particularly it has been extremely lenient in demanding them this year.

Another thing which will probably have a restraining effect upon the fillibustering proclivities of the democrats is that among the measures which the Edmunds resolution or a similar one will give an opportunity of becoming laws, which otherwise they cannot possibly have, are a number that the Labor organizations and the Farmers Alliance are unanimously clamoring for; and for the democrats to antagonize those organizations so openly—they are always ready to do so secretly—would mean that the Republicans would certainly elect two-thirds if no more of the next House of Representatives.

It begins to look now as though the reciprocity amendment to the tarid bill would provide for including other countries than those of South and Central America. Senator Aldrich, who in the absence of Senator Morrill is in charge of the tariff bill, has introduced an amendment to include coffee, tea and hides in the amendment giving the President authority to place a duty upon such articles coming from countries which refuse to reciprocate by allowing our goods free entry. Of course the question remains as yet an open one, and will so continue until the voting upon the amendments shall begin.

After several of the most disorderly days ever seen in the house, and an unprecedented display of personal feeling on the part of the members only 31 votes could be mustered by the opponents of the compound lard bill; but included in those thirty one were some of the loudest-mouthed men in Congress.

The house has passed the bill amending the eight hour law, which was asked for by the Labor organizations.

The President has signed the meat inspection bill, and a strong effort is being made to get the bill prohibiting dealing in options, in agricultural products, which was crowded out by democratic fillibustering last week, before the House this week. The bill is almost certain to pass if a vote can be had upon it.

Secretary Windom has issued a call for an additional $20,000,000 of 4½ per cent bonds upon the same terms offered in the call of August 21 par and accrued interest to September 1891, when they mature.

The President intended to have joined his family on Saturday at Cresson Springs whither they have gone to remain during the present month, but owing to the unusual pressure of important business he was unable to ge away from here. He will go this week if possible.

The Senate proposes holding three night sessions this week in order to expedite the consideration of the tariff bill.

Assistant Postmaster General Clarkson retired from official life Saturday afternoon. He will now give his whole time until after election to the Congressional campaign committee.

WOMAN'S INFLUENCE.

Dear girls, do you, the young ladies of to day, realize, amid the hurry and bustle of the gay life you lead, the weight of the responsibility that rests upon you? Do you stop to think that there is some one easily swayed by our influence, standing with watchful eyes for your example? Now girls, give your honest attention for one moment. Whither is that influence tending? Are you not treading the path you would blush to have your little brothers and sisters tread? Are your lives and example as chaste as you would have theirs to be? How does the new slang expression, which you took up because it was so funny, sound from infant lips? And yet it is all right to them, because "sister said it." How do you like to hear some cross, selfish word, which you did not half mean at the time and would never remember again, repeated by the same infant lips when some others girl's brother drops in to spend the evening? Then set a watch upon your lips and really be what you would seem.

Have you not a feeling akin to loneliness when your stalwart young brother begins to be restless and ill at ease, and is gradually drawn from your side? Where does he go? Whom does he choose for his companions. Ah! girls too often do your brothers choose for associates those with whom we would not be seen in company, and all too late you begin to ask why it is Perhaps if home had been more attractive all would have been well. If, instead of calling him a great, awkward boy, and telling him to get out of your sight, you would show a deference for his wishes and try only half as hard to make home pleasant to him as you do to chain that "other fellow" to your side, what a different—what an entirely different—boy he might be.

It is just for the girls to say whether or not they have brothers to be proud of, and whether or not their brothers respect and are proud of them.

A good daughter and sister seldom fails to make a good wife. Neither does a dutiful son and affectionate brother fail to make a good husband.

And how about the young man who has forsaken home, amusements, companions—everything for a place at your side? There is no doubt about your influence over him. He will shun what you shun; ridicule what you ridicule; respect that which you respect, and enjoy what you enjoy.

Do you always make the most of your influence? Do you try, with gentle, winning hand, to strengthen morals, heighten principles and point them to nobler and loftier aspirations?

You should strive earnestly and prayerfully to make every one with whom you come in contact, in some way the better for having known you. A helping hand, a bright smile, a kind word are little things, but for the want of them, many have fallen in the struggle of life.

Though you can do nothing great or grand, the little things of life demand our energies, and so many of these lie at out hand. Come, girls, lay aside so much useless frivolity. Life is too short to be spent before the mirror and in the ball-room. Bravely take on the armor of Christ and work for Him, knowing that in His own good time you shall have your reward.

THE democratic party has never done anything for the workingman. It has only sought to make a tool of him for its own selfish purposes.

MR. HALSTEAD'S VIEW.

Editor Halstead is full of views on different subjects. Here is one on an interesting subject:

"It is said that we are in danger of losing the next House. Well, suppose we do? What better adjunct could the Republican party have in the next presidential election than a Democratic House with their pretty leadership and their unappeasable follies and stupidities and capacity of meddling and muddling? The Republican Senate will be solid, and there will be a Republican President throughout the next Congress. Why should we be cast down if the Democrats should secure the next House and offer the country an object lesson?"

Here is another view on the same subject: "Pass the McKinley Tariff bill, with the reciprocity suggested by the Secretary of State, and the Republicans will win right along on the conditions of the country, and be as certain of the Presidency for the next 10 years as of the Senate; and the universal foreknowledge that the tariff is to stand, and that money matters are settled, will promote enterprise and find full employment for labor and capital. The Republicans will be in possession and the Democrats have nothing to go before the country upon. All things well considered, the Republican party is in better shape to-day than at any time since the inauguration of General Grant to be President."

Failed to Work Somehow.

Mr. Billus has a theory that his wife is too indulgent to tramps and beggars. With a dimly defined purpose of teaching her a lesson he disguised himself the other day as an abandoned vagabond, boldly rang the bell at his own front door and inquired for Mrs. Billus

"Have you any old clothes to give a poor man, mum?" he asked in a loud, aggressive, but carefully disguised voice when the lady presented herself.

Mrs. Billus looked at the soiled, grimy disreputable looking object before her with some interest. Whether or not she suspected the genuineness of the mendicant is not certainly known, but she answered:

"None that would fit you my good man. My husband is a much smaller man than you are."

She shut the door in his face, and Mr. Billus made his way back to his office down town.

"Darn it all!" he ejaculated, as he sneaked through a back alley. "I must have looked a thundering sight bigger than I feel just now!"

SENATOR GEO. W. DELAMATER, the republican nominee for Governor, will be in Bellefonte on Monday next September 7. Would it not be appropriate for all Centre countians to meet to do him honor? Why not get up a rousing big meeting and give every man in Centre county, who desires so to do, an opportunity to see the next Governor of Pennsylvania. Who will second the suggestion?

Our Story Teller

THE EXILES

A RUSSIAN STORY.

Yermac, who noticed his hesitation, suddenly ceased to manœuvre his fork and his forehead clouded.

"While awaiting your couriers' return," said the exile, "I advise you to busy yourself with the preparations for our departure. Besides, I intend to recompense you largely."

The Esaoule appeared instantly to take a resolution. At the word recompense his face lighted up. He promised himself that he would profit by this windfall, while taking every precaution to shield his responsibility.

"Let me see," said the former judge of the tribunal of Moscow to himself, "what reliance can be placed upon the honesty of this Russian functionary?"

The Esaoule, in snuffing a candle, put it out.

"An unexpected visit!" exclaimed M. Lafleur, who was familiar with the Russian proverbs.

He did not think that he was so near the truth.

At that moment, at the half-open door of the low-ceilinged apartment in which they were, appeared a huge nose, a bony head and a thin face beneath a dirty fur cap. The caftan of the person was in no better condition. Yegor divined the presence of a Jew peddler.

The intruder, on perceiving so many people, withdrew his nose, his head and his chest, afraid, doubtless, of being indiscreet.

Yegor thought that if the man were, as he believed, a Jew merchant, a few little purchases made of him and bestowed upon his host, in return for the forced hospitality they were receiving at his hands, might produce an excellent effect.

The Jew—for it was, indeed, a Jew—remained in the ante-chamber, a gloomy and dirty apartment, feebly lighted by a window having, instead of glass, plates of ice soldered with cold water, according to the custom in these regions where the low temperature breaks panes of glass. He comprehended that someone was approaching. Mysteriously, he seized Yegor's reindeer skin pelisse, and said to him, in a low voice:

"Esaoule, I have some more—of the purest, and in much greater quantity."

"I am not the Esaoule," said Yegor; "but what have you for sale?"

"You are not the Esaoule!" exclaimed the other, alarmed and, doubtless, fearing that he had said too much.

"I will willingly buy," resumed Yegor, "something that I can offer to the excellent Esaoule, to whom I am under obligation. What have you to sell?"

The Jew scratched his forehead with his long, lank fingers.

"Will you speak?"

"This is how the matter stands—what I am selling cannot be offered to everybody. From whence come you?"

"I am from—Barnaoul."

"And whither are you going?"

Yegor began to think the man excessively curious.

"I am going to Nijni-Kolimsk."

"I came from there."

"You came from Nijni-Kolimsk!" exclaimed Yegor, in alarm. "Do not tell that to any one here and take these twenty dollars for your discretion. Is it a bargain?"

While the exile was taking a note from his wallet, the Jew said to him, as he stretched out his hand:

"If you also have secrets—"

"Well?"

"Then we can have an understanding."

"Speak!"

"I am selling gold dust—in good condition!"

"Stolen gold?"

"Not so loud! Gold taken from those who put their hands on it without having taken the trouble to mine it. This," added he, drawing from his bosom a small squirrel skin bag, "comes from the sands of the Amou-Daria. Feel the weight of it! Twenty-eight ounces—almost no silver at all mixed with it and still less copper than silver."

"And you will give me all this dust for a little of my own gold?"

"Yes—for gold coin or even paper money."

Yegor could not avoid smiling at the idea of this exchange of contraband gold for that bearing the stamp of the State.

"There is more than three hundred dollars worth. I ask only seventy-five. Is that too much?"

"No; it is not too much. But I am not rich, and I wish to present your bag to the Esaoule."

"You have then a very great favor to purchase?"

"Perhaps. I will give you fifty dollars."

"No; I prefer to go to the Esaoule, for whom I have, besides, a verbal commission from the Esaoule of Nijni-Kolimsk."

"But what of the money I gave you and our agreement?"

"I forgot that," said the Jew. "Well, I will not see the Esaoule, but you will go as high as sixty dollars?"

"Agreed, my friend. Pass me your bag; there are people in that room who must be weary of waiting for me."

The exchange of gold and paper was made, and the purchaser and seller departed in different directions, apparently satisfied with the bargain."

"It was with you, Esaoule," said Yegor, returning to the low-ceilinged room, "that the Jew had business. He asked me to hand you this."

The official weighed the little bag in his hand. He partially opened it, and saw the precious yellow gold sparkling within.

He did not hesitate a second.

"I know," said he, "and I thank you!"

He grasped the bag and gave Yegor a look which could have but one signification, namely, that he trusted to his discretion.

"The scoundrel!" muttered Yermac, who had lost nothing either of the brief dialogue or the movements accompanying it. "He allows himself to be bought."

It was too much for him. He was about to speak, to denounce the fugitives before the Cossacks of the ostrog. He was about to reproach the Esaoule with his venality and make a scene. He persuaded himself without further hesitation that there existed in him two things, morally independent of each other—the functionary and the man. If the man had contracted a debt of gratitude, he was free to pay it when and how he thought best; the functionary was obliged to discharge obligations much more contracted, much more rigorous.

"Esaoule," he began

Yegor and Nadege saw from the expression of his face that, at last, he was going to denounce them.

But the Esaoule had just caught an idea, a brilliant idea, he thought; and he cried, vivaciously, interrupting the chief of police:

"Allow me! I have thought, Messieurs, of a way to arrange everything."

"What is it, Esaoule?" asked Yermac.

"It is this: You can all depart on your journey and that to-morrow, after a night of rest and warmth in this house. Two of my Cossacks will accompany you and will assure me on their return of the truth—which I no longer doubt for that matter—of the story you have told me!"

"I very willingly accept your offer," Yegor hastened to say, though the new prospect presented by the relay-master's proposition filled him with terror; but he preferred being escorted by two Cossacks over the road to Nijni-Kolimsk to being delivered up by Yermac. The danger was less immediate.

The chief of police, for his part, on hearing announced the terms of the arrangement decided upon by the Esaoule, suddenly felt weaken in him that determination which, a moment before, he was about to take so resolutely, on seeing Yegor and his companions apparently slipping from him, thanks to the purchased complicity of the relay master. He resolved to remain silent, thinking that he would, perhaps, before long, get the better of his adversaries, and that, too, without having to do aught against them.

Yegor, who was observing him, noticed this change, and said to the Esaoule, in a tone of great relief:

"Well, Monsieur, you have now nothing further to do than to look after our teams."

"Rest easy," answered the Esaoule; "you shall have for each of your nartas fifteen or eighteen of the best dogs the district can furnish."

CHAPTER XVI.—A STRATAGEM.

On the day succeeding this perilous adventure, might have been seen in one of those yourtes, styled yourtes of refuge, erected at intervals upon the roads of Siberia—the Czar's highway, this time, followed for an entire day—a joyous company established around a huge, bright fire. The smoke escaped from the yourte through an opening in the centre of the conical roof.

Out-of-doors, dogs were curled up beside two nartas, well embedded in the snow to keep warm, their tails folded on their muzzles as long as the muzzle of a wolf.

Two horses tied to a post were devouring a slim ration of feed.

In a kettle, placed over the fire of the yourte, the food for the dogs was being cooked.

The merry-maker in chief of the company was M. Lafleur—the inexhaustible M. Lafleur. He it was who, after having done the cooking and laid the cloth—figuratively speaking—had urged each person to participate in an excellent repast placed upon a flat stone serving as a table and of which a quarter of wild mutton, admirably roasted, formed the principal dish.

The foreseeing Parisian had provided with himself this abundant and savory meat on quitting the ostrog, which had come so near being the end of the fugitive's journey. Huge slices of smoked salmon had already made their appearance before the mutton, and this salmon had but one defect, that of producing tremendous thirst. Of this defect the fugitives were about to make use.

The guests—Yegor, Nadege, and Yermac—seated on the ground had the place of honor; them came the two Cossacks, who had magnificent appetites, and, finally, M. Lafleur, the little Pole and, modestly keeping somewhat in the background, the faithful Yakoutes Tekel and Chort.

There was no limit, that evening, to the liberality of M. Lafleur, who uncorked without regret a third bottle of brandy, a prodigality concerted, for that matter, with Yegor Semenoff. There must have been powerful reasons for treating the two Cossacks well to warrant making such a large breach in the supply of provisions brought from Zachiversk by Tekel. Did they wish to make friends of them?—to detach them at need from Yermac?—to bargain with them? All that would seem hazardous, difficult, and even extremely perilous.

Yegor, aided by M. Lafleur, was working to attain a simpler and surer end—to intoxicate the two Cossacks and get rid of them by leaving them behind.

"It has been many a day, if we except yesterday at the ostrog," said M. Lafleur, "since we have had such a substantial repast. Unfortunately, this salted fish has made me precious thirsty—and the others also!"

And he poured out a fresh bumper for each of the two Cossacks, who smiled good-humoredly, displaying their white teeth. They seemed to protest by their air against the words of their generous cupbearer.

"Well," said M. Lafleur, "I see you like salted and smoked salmon." He added, addressing one of the Cossacks: "What is your name, comrade?"

"Nicolai," answered the man.

"And yours?" said he to the other.

"Mine? Ardalion."

"Well, Nicolai and Ardalion, I have an idea. It is that you prefer vodki to salmon."

This was so much in accordance with the Cossacks' thoughts that they burst out laughing. When their guttural hi hi's had somewhat abated, Yermac, who had grown uneasy and had ceased to eat, spoke to the dancing-master.

"Monsieur Lafleur, you are giving these men too much to drink!" observed he.

"Ah! I know it very well!" answered the Parisian. "The rascals are making a famous hole in our supplies."

"Happily," said Yegor, "we are not very far from our destination."

Yermac cast upon Yegor a severe look which was almost equivalent to giving him the lie. Yegor understood it thus and turned away his eyes.

"I tell you that you are giving them too much to drink," resumed the chief of police. "And really, Monsieur—Toumanoff," added he, with emphasis, "when one is charged with conducting a well brought up young person like Mademoiselle, one should be careful to keep from her people whose words—"

"Oh!" said Nadege, "I have neither the right nor the leisure to be very particular."

"He wishes to stop us from drinking, that fellow," said one of the Cossacks, pushing his companion's elbow.

"At the very moment we are being regaled," said the other. "What can the Polish priest be thinking of!"

"A dominican of Samogitia," murmured M. Lafleur in the ear of the Cossack who had first spoken.

"Biacha—biacha," said Nicolai, passing his hand over the chief of police's back as if caressing a sheep.

"My friends," said Yermac, "you are a little too free. If you knew who I am, you would regret your words. I might cause you a great deal of trouble."

"Well, who are you?" said the Cossack, why styled himself Ardalion.

"Who am I?" answered Yermac. And without further hesitation, resolved to recall the Cossacks to their duty at any price, he added, in a tone of authority: "I am the chief of police of Yakoutsk!"

"Ah! that is very good!" cried Ardalion, giving Yermac a rough tap on the shoulder.

"He don't wish us to drink! Heavens and earth!" said the other Cossack. "I am a son of a gun if he himself has not already left his reason at the bottom of his cup!"

"I will make you repent of your insolence!" cried the chief of police.

"He has wicked vodki in him!" observed Nicolai.

"The devil is at his shoulder!" said Ardalion.

"Let us speak no more of him," resumed Nicolai; "we can get no good out of him!"

"Will you allow them, Monsieur Semenoff—Monsieur Toumanoff, I should say—to insult me in your presence?"

"Great heavens, Monsieur! I am used myself to suffering so many things!"

"Come, let us have peace!" cried the dancing-master; "and let us all drink a cup as a token of sincere reconciliation."

The Cossacks, very willing to obey, were already extending their wooden goblets. Nicolai even said to M. Lafleur: "Precisely so, your Highness!" As for Ardalion, he made this proverbial remark: "One does not get the headache when one drinks at the expense of others."

M. Lafleur first filled the chief of police's cup. Yermac, furious at the role they were making him play, hurled the liquor into the fire which was warming and smoking the yourte, and a blue flame shot up suddenly from it.

"But can you not see," said he to the soldiers, "that they wish to make you drunk to play a trick upon you?"

The Cossacks looked at each other. One scratched the nape of his neck and the other his back.

"It is true! Why do not they themselves drink?" asked Ardalion of his comrade.

M. Lafleur, who had just poured out vodki for the two Yakoutes, kept in reserve by him until then to be brought forward at the proper time, turned them loose upon the Cossacks. The latter then, ceasing to be suspicious, demanded more liquor, impatiently striking their cups against the huge stone which served as a table.

Before so much noise, Nadege fled with Ladislas to the extremity of the yourte.

Yermac made a last effort.

"My friends," said he to the Cossacks, "summon up all your remaining coolness and try to understand me."

"The dominican of Samogitia is going to teach us the catechism," said Ardalion.

"He is like the thirsty fly—no way to get rid of him," added Nicolai.

"As true as I exist, your lives are, perhaps, at stake," resumed Yermac.

But the two Cossacks were no longer in a condition to understand him. They began to utter all sorts of pleasantries. Finally, drunk with noise, excitement and liquor, they retired to lie down in a corner of the yourte.

"You have carried your point!" said the chief of police, addressing Yegor.

"Perhaps!" said the latter, in a low tone.

He seemed to be afraid of awakening the two soldiers. At a sign he gave M. Lafleur, Nadege and Ladislas, each of them noiselessly made some arrangements to sleep; but Yegor and M. Lafleur slept with one eye open. As to Yermac, a prey to strong excitement, he walked back and forth across the yourte.

At length, being able to control himself no longer, he went towards the Cossacks to arouse them; but one of them—Ardalion—somewhat refreshed by his short nap, opened his eyes and shook his companion, to whom he spoke in a whisper.

They arose, and the chief of police thought he might possibly make them understand him.

Nicolai made him a mysterious sign, as he went with the tread of a wolf, followed by his companion, towards the entrance of the yourte. It was an invitation to accompany them.

Yermac obeyed, despite the terrible cold which reigned without.

"In which narta do they keep the supply of vodki?" Nicolai asked him. "We must have another little drink while the rest sleep."

"But you have already drunk too much!" cried the chief of police. "Take care as to what you are about to do! You will bring ruin down upon your heads!"

"You are beginning again! We will find it well enough without you," said Nicolai, shrugging his shoulders.

Meanwhile, the other Cossack was searching in one of the nartas. He was in luck, and speedily found the object of their desires—a huge bottle of liquor. He seized it, uttering a cry of joy, and returned to the yourte with his companion. Yermac walked behind them, determined to try once more.

"Listen," said he; "you have committed a robbery!"

"Not so loud!" said Ardalion; "you will awaken them!"

"But let the robbery go!" resumed Yermac. "If you will heed me, you will not drink further, and will not put yourselves in such a state as to unfit you for the performance of your duty, your service."

"I believe he is going to begin to teach us over again!" observed Nicolai.

And adroitly uncorking the bottle, he lifted its neck to his mouth and greedily took several swallows.

"It is my turn!" cried the comrade, snatching the bottle from him without ceremony.

"Don't guzzle all of it!" exclaimed Nicolai, as Ardalion drank without taking breath.

"Here—take it! I make you a present of the rest!" said the latter; giving vent to a deep sigh.

And, with an uncertain step, he went towards the spot where, a few moments before, he had been lying.

Yermac strove to seize the bottle which the other Cossack, doubtless, was about to empty.

"Do you want a drink!" stuttered the latter, offering it to him.

"No; I do not want a drink, wretch!" said Yermac. "I want to save you from ruin—for all this will turn out ill for you!"

"If you don't want a drink, let me be!" said Nicolai.

He sat down on the ground, braced the bottle between his knees, and stretched out his hand to take a wooden cup from the huge stone. When he had grasped it with unsteady fingers, he filled and emptied it several times, the while staring at Yermac with an air of defiance, but with wild looks.

Yegor and M. Lafleur silently followed this scene with eager eyes. On turning, Yermac saw them.

"Well," said he to Yegor, "you have completely succeeded."

"Not yet," said the latter.

At this moment, the Cossack let his head fall on one side and rolled over upon the floor of the yourte. Both he and his comrade were dead drunk.

Then Yegor aroused the two Yakoutes, and directed them to get the teams in readiness.

"Master," said Tekel, "you shall be obeyed."

A moment later, the barking of the dogs announced that Yegor's order was being executed.

Yegor and M. Lafleur conversed rapidly in whispers; the result of their conference was the decision that they must take the chief of police with them. To leave him behind seemed as yet too dangerous.

Yermac comprehended that they were talking about him and said, simply:

"What are you going to do with me, Monsieur Semenoff? I can call you by your name now."

"You can readily understand," answered Yegor, "that we are not going to abandon you in this place."

"But you count on abandoning these soldiers here, do you not?"

"Certainly; they have horses. But what could you do on foot? Besides, your society is still most agreeable to us, and we should be very sorry to be deprived of it."

"I understand," said Yermac, who bitterly repented of having allowed himself to be tricked. "I can do nothing but obey," added he. "But take care; a moment will come when I shall feel that I am altogether released from every obligation to you."

"Released!" exclaimed M. Lafleur. "But the bear with the collar, wretch! Have you forgotten the bear? But where would you have been, I ask of you!—where would you have been had we not rescued you? You belong to us from the sole of your foot to the crown of your head—all that the bear might have devoured. Submit to be led—and with docility, my dear fellow."

CHAPTER XVII.—THE CHAMAN.

The right bank of the Kolima rises almost perpendicularly everywhere; in certain places the rocks of schist veined with red clay even slope over the stream. But, at the spot where the Omolon flows into the Kolima, the right bank suddenly becomes level. It is occupied by the settlement of Zalivina, in which with Cossacks and Russians (the descendants of exiles, or Cossacks from the ostrog of Anadirsk driven back by the Tchouktchis) are mingled, living in perfect harmony, Yakoutes and Youkaghiris.

Upon the Kolima floated mists from the Arctic Ocean, which was then being solidified by the action of the cold. These mists had already moderated the temperature a trifle, when the "warm wind" began to blow, bringing with it more than thirty degrees of heat.

Let us penetrate into one of those huts built of the floating wood deposited upon the banks of the periodical spring inundations. Its walls were composed of beams placed one above another, the interstices being filled with moss and moistened potter's clay. It was surrounded by a sloping bank of earth to protect it against the cold. Its roof was covered with earth well beaten down.

The interior was divided into several small apartments by a few low partitions.

In the main apartment, a corner was occupied by the tchouvale, a kind of Yakoute chimney formed of willow branches twisted together basket fashion and plastered within and without with potter's clay; a hole cut in the roof gave passage to the smoke.

This apartment was at once the kitchen and the sitting-room. The entire family worked and took their meals there. Two openings of a foot square on the southern side of the hut (closed in summer with eel skin) were now filled with plates of ice from five to six inches thick, which allowed slender threads of light to make their way into the interior.

Upon one of the wide benches fastened to the partition was lying a sick young girl. About her were two native women, and two women of Russian origin, one of whom was accompanied by her husband.

The women of Russian origin differed from the Yakoutes in having regular features and vigorous constitutions; they were taller and had hair of a golden hue, one of them being even pretty. They also differed from the natives in their costumes. While the dark Yakoutes, with drooping eyes, were clad in garments of softened reindeer skin, the hair on the inside and the leather dyed red with the bark of the alder tree, the Russian ladies wore cotton garments. As coquetry is always present in women, the reindeer garments of the Yakoutes were trimmed on the sleeves with fine strips of beaver or river otter skin.

The native women also wore pantaloons of reindeer hide and, over all, a sort of tunic or kamley of untanned reindeer skin to which the smoke had communicated a yellowish tinge. The two Russian ladies, who, as well as the Russian, were present as visitors, had chintz tunics with fur about the shoulders. Their heads were covered with pointed fur caps which descended upon their cheeks.

The Russian was wrapped, above his leather breeches, in a large pelisse, and wore enormous boots over deer skin socks; a huge knife hung from his belt, beside a pewter pipe with a very short stem and a bark box, containing a tinder steel and native tobacco made of the leaf of the timyane, mixed with larch wood, reduced to powder.

A kettle placed over the fire contained fish for the dogs.

Upon the table was set choice food, as if for a fete; a superb piece of reindeer meat, smoked reindeer tongues, frozen fish, strouganina, youkoula and tchir (the tchir is a very fat and highly esteemed fish, the flesh of which is preserved by drying it and pounding it together with a little suet). There were also custards garnished with red caviar, and little pates made of the flour of the makarcha root and filled with minced fish entrails. A box held an ample supply of tea.

The hut belonged to one of the most important natives, a descendant of the ancient chiefs, who had, notwithstanding, lost a portion of his authority over his tribe.

Metek had not yet returned with his sledges loaded with the spoils of the summer chase. No one equalled him in pursuing the reindeer over the great lakes and in slaughtering them in the water, where they believed they had found a refuge. The season before last he had killed a hundred of them. His return was expected at the time of the passing of the herring. Schools of these fish had ascended the Kolimd, and the dwellers upon its banks had taken more than a thousand of them at each haul of the net; nevertheless, Metek was not yet in the bosom of his family.

The sick young girl wore, over other garments of a more simple nature, a mantle of cotton tissue of variegated pattern, furnished with a cape from which hung martens' tails. Her black hair was arranged in long twists, and was kept back from her forehead by a band.

She frequently suffered from a strange nervous malady, to which all the inhabitants of the north of Siberia are more or less subject—the miryak. Now, she was a prey to violent convulsions.

"If her father were only here!" said the eldest of the Yakoute women to the visitors. She was the young invalid's mother. "What is your advice in regard to the child, Anastaci Ivanitch?"

"Have patience!" said the Russian, seating himself. "Your daughter is certainly under the malign influence of Agrafena of Djigansk!"

The sorceress, Agrippine (Ogropono), the remembrance of whom yet torments and troubles all Siberia, lived in a past century. Woe to him who had not for her all the consideration she exacted? Transforming herself into a black crow, she pursued him while hunting and traveling, raising against him violent wind storms, causing his baggage to fall into the water and even going so far as to make him lose his reason. At eighty years of age, the eyes of the sorceress were still as bright as the morning star, and her voice had that clear sound which ice sends forth when struck.

Another fit seized upon the young girl when she heard the name of the sorceress of Djigansk uttered.

At that moment, these words were pronounced in a very loud tone outside of the hut:

"Have you a kettle of tea?"

"What answer is to be returned?" asked Anastaci of the invalid's mother.

"Ask how many there are," said she.

"How many are you?" demanded the Russian.

Howls of dogs prevented the response from being heard.

"How many?" repeated the Russian.

"Seven."

"Open!" commanded the old Yakoute woman.

Anastaci opened the door.

Yegor and Yermac appeared. Upon their skin garments was more than an inch of ice. Nadege followed them into the hut, supported by M. Lafleur. Tekel carried little Ladislas, who was so benumbed by the cold that he lay as if paralyzed. Chort stood upon the threshold and received from each the over garment removed on entering.

Yegor advanced a few steps; then, perceiving the young Yakoute girl towards whom all the inhabitants of the hut had hurried, he pointed her out to the Parisian with his finger.

The latter approached the patient.

"Keep away from me!" cried she, drawing back. "You come from the cold!"

"What is the matter with her?" asked M. Lafleur, looking interrogatively at the mother.

"Oh! Ogropono-Djiganskoy!" said the old woman.

This was not the first time the dancing-master had heard of the accursed sorceress. He had an inspiration. To begin, he produced his violin and placed it on the table beside the good things prepared as if for a repast.

He made a sign to his exhausted companions to seat themselves upon the benches extending around the apartment.

"What mean these preparations for rejoicing?" asked he, pointing to the little pates, the custards, and the frozen fish.

"Ve expected the father of the family," said the old Yakoute woman. "He has not returned from the summer chase—and my daughter is under the influence of the sorceress! Two such misfortunes are a great deal for one day!"

"How old is she?" demanded M. Lafleur.

"It has snowed eighteen times since she came into the world."

"I am going to cure her."

"Are you a chaman?" (Conjurer and doctor.)

"Yes, and I come from afar."

M. Lafleur wished to say, perhaps, that no man is either a prophet or a chaman in his own country.

Then, in a tone of authority, the Parisian directed his companions to take some of the delicacies spread out upon the table.

"We are famished," said he, "and shall eat everything there, for your husband will return neither to-day nor to-morrow."

"Will he ever return?" asked the old woman, anxiously.

"My art reveals to me that he will," audaciously answered M. Lafleur, assuming with a lie his role of sorcerer. He added: "You shall judge of my power."

At this, he seized his violin and, despite the numbness of his fingers, drew from it harmonious sounds. He played a reverie, a cradle-song or a prayer.

At the first notes, the attention of the young girl was awakened. Soon she changed her position and sat up; then, quivering, her eyes lost in a kind of ecstacy, she advanced towards the musician, bowing before him with clasped hands, bending her body still more when he drew solemn sounds from his instrument and raising herself at the high notes, radiant, light, with outstretched arms. Her nervous disease took a new character.

At the last note, she sank heavily upon the floor. M. Lafleur raised her, carried her to the bench she had occupied a moment before, and said to the old Yakoute woman:

"Now, some tea, babouchka (mother), some tea, a great deal of tea, and your daughter is out of danger—cured for a long while—perhaps, forever!"

Everybody was amazed. The mother of the invalid wept for joy.

The other Yakoute woman, a homely creature, who bore upon her face rough tattoo marks, embraced M. Lafleur after the fashion of the country. She was the invalid's aunt—and an old maid!

Nadege said to Yegor:

"How good M. Lafleur is! It was for us he did all that!—it was to secure us a hospitable reception!"

Yegor thought he could do no less than add his note to the concert of congratulations in progress around the pretended chaman.

Yermac's piteous look was a sight to see. "I have become the companion of a charlatan!" thought he.

"You are all welcome," said the old Yakoute woman to her new guests. "And now, partake of the best we possess. You are in the house of Metek, the first of his tribe. Before coming, following the course of the Omolon, to settle on the shores of the Kolima, he was chief."

AN ELECTRIC RAILWAY.

WHY NOT ERECT ONE IN BELLEFONTE. A GOOD INVESTMENT FOR AN ENTERPRISING BUSINESS MAN.

It has often been discussed, but seldom agitated, that there be erected on the principal streets of Bellefonte some mode of rapid transit. Street railway—either horse or steam—would seem almost an impossible enterprise. But science and the inventive genius of man have surmounted what difficulty would be experienced in the construction of the above named two modes of rapid transit, by appropriating to such use electricity. Why not then build an electric railway? It would certainly pay a good interest on the investment.

Say, for instance, a line should be run from the depot up High street to the Diamond, then south to Bishop street and east Bishop to the new school house. From the Diamond north to Linn—or to Curtin, for that matter—and then east and west on Linn street. The way roads are now built, and the force that there is in electricity as a motive power which enables it to propel a car up very steep grades, the cost of the construction of a road in Bellefonte would not be very great. The income from such a road would certainly be enough to pay all running expenses and allow good dividends to the stockholders.

All that is wanted is for some man like Mr. F. W. Crider or Mr. Daniel Garman to get an idea into their heads that it would be a public benefit, as well as a good investment for themselves, and they will be quick to take hold of such a scheme. How would it do for Mr. Crider and Mr. Garman to put their heads together and see if they could not concoct some scheme or lay some plan hereby an electric railway will be built and the public mutually benefitted? We would like very much to hear from some of the leading business men and prominent residents of Bellefonte, and also from Mr. Crider and Mr. Garman, regarding this matter. Any communication relating thereto will be given due space in the columns of this paper

Two Wants.

From the H. DEMOCRAT.

We note by the Clinton Republican that Ed. Coveland gives legal notice that he is going to make another application to the Board of Pardons at its next meeting on September 16th, to be relieved of the pains and penalties imposed upon him by the Court of Quarter Sessions of Clinton county on June 10, 1889." Ed is doubtless getting tired of penitentiary life, but he ought to be able to stand his imprisonment when his victim was obliged to and something so much worse, even death itself

Al. Feidler, of Keystone Gazette, Bellefonte, was in the city on Tuesday and left on the late for Harrisburg. Al. has some notion of becoming a candidate for Senator of the Republican ticket. What a vaulting ambition that man has. He should be careful that he does not o'erleap himself. Better stick to the post office, Feidler, is a bad district for Republican candidates for Senator.

The Miners Me

The joint conference between the Mine Workers' Association of America representing 12,000 miners in Cambria, Clearfield, Center, Huntingdon, Jefferson and Carbon counties, the operators controlling the same, in Altoona, adjourned without result. The miners presented a new scale, which the operators found it impossible to seriously consider, owing to its alleged extravagant demands, claiming that its provisions would compel them to shut down their works indefinitely. The miners first threatened a general strike, to extend throughout Pennsylvania, but after deliberation agreed to allow the matter to rest until September 10, when another conference will be held at a place not yet decided upon.

The miners are firm in their demands, and claim a general strike will be the final result.

—On Wednesday the new piano for Garman's new opera house was received It is a magnificent upright "Sterling" piano, manufactured in Connecticut. The "Sterling" is now one of the best brands of pianos manufactured and the one that Mr. Garman has purchased is one of the best and most costly of that make. Its tuning is perfect and the volume full and strong though always under the control of the performer. To listen to the music of this piano will in itself be a treat for all who may attend any performance at the new opera house —And now the play season will soon be over and the boy and girl will wend their way, not to the meadow and the brook to pluck butter cups and daisies and catch the little speckled beauties and the unsuspecting "sucker," but, with book and slate beneath their arm, take their way to the "old school house." Boys and girls, improve your school days. You may not now realize what advantages you have but improve your opportunity and in the years to come you will be thankful and see how wisely you acted.

SNOW SHOE HAPPENINGS.

A Complete Resume of all the Happenings on the Mountain Top.

The annual picnic held by the members of St. Mary's church was a grand success financially and socially. Every body was there. General good feeling prevailed—everybody seemed to thoroughly enjoy themselves. A large number from a distance were there.

Mrs. Reamer, of Bellefonte, accompanied by a lady friend spent Tuesday in our little city of the "Shoe."

Rev. Mathers, of Bellwood, preached in Snow Shoe and Moshannon, in the Presbyterian church, on last Sunday.

Preaching in four weeks in the Presbyterian church again.

FIDELIS.

A Club Man's Baby Friends.

'Every day as I come down town,' said a bachelor club man, 'there is a certain dooryard I look into, or rather used to—I don't now. The two prettiest children I ever saw in my life, I think, lived there. Little things they were, Georgie was about 4 years old—fat, pudgy little rascal he was. Margery was just a step higher than he. It was funny to see the motherly ways she had. I used to see them playing keep house, and it was always Margery who would 'p'tend she was the mamma. Well, sir, it used to do my bachelor heart good to see them. I remember how I learned their names. It was just as I was passing by when the front door opened and a sweet faced woman called out: 'Georgie Marge come in now and let mamma fix you up and we'll go and visit grandma.'

'In a minute. Dis as soon's we dit iss pie fixed.'

'Well, it got so that they came to know me, and they used to strike me for cigarette pictures regularly. I used to look forward to meeting them every day Maybe you know how hungry a man gets for a little of the simplicity of child life now and again. It was just about the latter part of April I was called away to be gone about two weeks. If you remember diphtheria was raging then, and many a 'little white hearse went glimmering by.'

'The first day after I returned you may be sure I looked at the cottage where I had so often seen the little children playing. It was silent now. The blinds were closed. There was none of the ringing laughter and nobody shouting: "Dit off; de tars is 'topped!' My baby friends were gone."

'Dead?' asked somebody, breaking the hush.

'No; moved away.

Is Not a Candidate.

J. A. Fiedler informs the NEWS that he is not a candidate for Senatorial or any other political honors at this time. He is thoroughly content with what he has, and his only ambition is to furnish the people of Bellefonte and vicinity with as efficient and prompt postal facilities as is possible.

A SCENE OF WILD PANIC

The Steamer Massachusetts Crashed Into by a Railroad Scow.

1,200 LIVES ENDANGERED.

The Signals Were Disregarded and a Terrific Collision Ensued—A Mad Rush for Life Preservers, but Luckily They Were Not Needed.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—The steamer Massachusetts, of the Providence line, while off the Battery, on her trip from Providence to this city, this morning, collided with a Pennsylvania railroad scow, and the 1,200 passengers on the steamer had a narrow escape from death. The steamer was badly damaged, and a wild panic prevailed. Passengers screamed, men, women and children ran for life preservers, and the utmost confusion ensued. Thirty feet of the steamer's rail and paddle box were carried away, and it will be some time before she will be able to resume her trips.

The Massachusetts, the largest and finest steamer of the Providence line, passed under the Brooklyn bridge a few minutes before 8 o'clock with her decks crowded with passengers. There were 1,200 people on board, an immense number for the steamer to carry. Four hundred of them were compelled to sleep on mattresses on the cabin floor last night. The journey from Providence had been made in safety, and the crowd of people were congratulating themselves on their safe and pleasant journey, when the steamer began to round the Battery to enter the North river for her pier at Murray street.

Six hundred feet off the Battery was a scow loaded with railroad cars in charge of a tug of the Pennsylvania railroad. The tug had just pulled out of the dock at Jersey City, and was battling with the tide to clear the Battery and enter the East river.

A Fearful Crash.

Capt. Griffith, of the Massachusetts, was in the wheel house of the steamer at the time, and seeing that he could easily pass between the scow and the Battery, he sounded two long blasts on the whistle, to which the tug responded with two whistles. The steamer's head had hardly begun to turn around when the pilots of the steamer noticed another tug just behind the scow and one whistle was sounded, the steamer intending to pass between the two boats.

The captain of the Pennsylvania tug, evidently thinking that the steamer meant to change her course, blew one long whistle in answer. The steamer's pilots realizing the mistake the tug had made blew two long whistles for the tug to keep on her course. It was too late. Both the steamer and tug had begun to wear around, and before the passengers on the steamer realized what was going to happen the heavy scow, with its load of freight cars, crashed into the steamer on its starboard side. There was a horrible sound of crashing glass and wood, and in a moment there was a panic among the passengers.

Those who were upon the steamer's decks began to shout for help and tear away the life preservers. Those below, who were either in their staterooms or at breakfast, abandoned everything in order to save themselves, and those who witnessed the sight say that pandemonium prevailed. Women and children fainted and shrieked, and it was fully ten minutes before the steamer's officers had them under control.

The Tugboat Captain to Blame.

The tug and scow after the crash pulled back away from the steamer and sounded her whistle for help, thinking that the steamer was sinking. In a few minutes tugs and steamers were making for the disabled steamer from all points in the vicinity, and she was soon surrounded with more than enough vessels to carry all the passengers, had such a course as the abandonment of the steamer been necessary.

The scow had crushed the lower part of the paddle box and broken the heavy guard and stanchion for a distance of over thirty feet, but the wheel itself was uninjured, and the steamer proceeded on her way to her pier. The passengers were landed at half-past 8 o'clock, many of them with pale faces. A few of the women were compelled to remain on board some time until they had overcome their fright.

Those on the steamer who were witnesses of the accident, and who heard the exchange of whistles between the steamer and the tug, say that the blame rests entirely with the tugboat captain in mistaking the signals from the steamer. Had he pursued his course when the steamer blew two whistles the accident would not have happened.

The tug was the Oakland, one of the smallest of the Pennsylvania railroad's tugs, and both the scow and the tug are uninjured.

Left Them to Their Fate.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 3.—Capt. Noble, of the ship W. B. Godfrey, reports that he spoke the bark Henry Buck seventy days from Newcastle, N. S. W., several hundred miles from the New Zealand coast. She was flying signals of distress, and her captain reported that she had been dismantled by a hurricane. He begged for supplies, but the captain of the Godfrey was unable to help her owing to the heavy sea. The Buck was laden with coal and carried a big crew.

EX-SENATOR PLATT DECLINED.

He Refused the Spanish Mission and Will Accept No Public Office.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—A dispatch from Washington received in this city late Monday made public the interesting fact that Thomas C. Platt had been offered and had declined the ministry of the United States to Spain. The published correspondence between Secretary Blaine and Mr. Platt was even more interesting from a declaration contained in Mr. Platt's reply that he does not intend to assume the responsibilities of any office, local or federal, thereby taking himself out of the list of candidates for the United States senatorship.

T. C. PLATT.

The correspondence between the secretary of state and Mr. Platt reads as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
WASHINGTON, June 20, 1890.

MY DEAR MR. PLATT—By the president's direction and with great personal pleasure myself I tender to you the mission to Spain made vacant by the resignation of Hon. T. W. Palmer, of Michigan. Hoping that your convenience and your desires will combine to persuade you to accept the position, I am yours very sincerely,

Hon. T. C. Platt. JAMES G. BLAINE.

Ex-Senator Platt's significant reply to Mr. Blaine is as follows:

NEW YORK, July 5, 1890.

MY DEAR MR. BLAINE—I am in receipt of your esteemed favor of the 20th ult., conveying to me the president's instructions and your compliments in tendering me the mission to Spain made vacant by the resignation of Governor Palmer, of Michigan.

While properly estimating the honor conferred, and duly appreciating this evidence of the president's confidence and your personal regard, I feel constrained to return my declination of the position.

Numerous business engagements and obligations preclude the possibility of my accepting the responsibilities of office of any name or nature, local or federal, however honorable or alluring it may be. I shall be content to serve in the ranks, asking no other reward than the proud consciousness of possessing the confidence and esteem of those true Republicans who, like yourself, have made the "Grand Old Party" immortal. Yours faithfully, T. C. PLATT.

The Hon. James G. Blaine.

Mr. Platt replied to the direct question by a reporter, "Will you be a candidate for the United States senate this winter?" by taking a copy of his letter to Mr. Blaine and reading aloud that portion of it in which he refers to business engagements precluding his accepting any office. When he had done this Mr. Platt remarked, "I should think any one could understand that."

Down Hill at Fearful Speed.

JOLIET, Ills., Sept. 3.—The pleasant observance of Labor day was marred here by a frightful accident. On the way to the grounds, when midway up Morgan hill, one of the trailers to an electric street car became uncoupled and sped down hill at a terrific speed. Men, women and children leaped off and a number were seriously injured. Those seriously hurt are: Miss Josie Caul, ugly cuts and bruises on head, neck and back; Miss Mary Caul, cut and internally injured; Mrs. Henry Beck, internal injuries; August Bischman, arm badly sprained and head cut.

A Picnic Party Wrecked.

FOND DU LAC, Wis., Sept. 3.—A party of young people had a picnic at the Ledge, east of this city. When they were returning the driver lost control of the horses, and they ran down a very steep hill. The omnibus was overturned and wrecked. The injured were: Miss Carrie Abel, head badly cut and bruised; Miss Rose Abel, wrist sprained; Miss Minnie Hamburger, leg and arm wrenched and seriously bruised; Charles Kayser, wrist and ankle dislocated.

The Headlight Was Unlighted.

STERLING, Ills., Sept. 3.—A night freight engine on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy road struck a hand car operated by F. Werres, Henry Jordan and George Miller, railroad employes, killing the first two instantly and injuring Miller so badly that he died. The engine's headlight had not been lighted, and the men were not aware that the train was approaching until it struck them.

An Epidemic of Robberies.

BERLIN, Sept. 3.—There is an epidemic of robberies in this city. In one case ten thousand dollars' worth of bonds were stolen from an office. The thefts of jewelry from private residences aggregated a very large sum. The police are severely censured for failing to prevent these occurrences.

The Republican Club Convention.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Sept. 3.—The Republican club convention is to meet here on Thursday. Among prominent persons already on the ground are Judge Thurston, of Nebraska, chairman, and A. B. Humphrey, of New York, secretary. The semi-annual meeting of the executive committee will be held Wednesday, when plans will be formulated for assisting in the election of Republican members of congress in November. Many prominent gentlemen of the party have promised to be present and address the convention, which is expected to remain in session for two days.

Conductors Want More Pay.

CHICAGO, Sept. 3.—A committee representing the passenger and freight conductors of the Chicago and Northwestern railway and all its auxiliary lines except the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha was in Chicago in consultation with General Manager J. M. Whitman regarding an increase of pay. At present the men are paid from $75 to $90 a month, but they demand a scale on the basis of $125 a month for the highest paid men. The conference was entirely harmonious, and the request of the men was taken under consideration.

—On Saturday afternoon about 2 o'clock, while George W. Curtin, a "mule catcher" at the scales in the Tyrone yard, in an attempt to couple cars had his right arm below the elbow caught between the dead-woods and badly crushed. He was removed to the surgical room at the station and Drs. J. M. Gemmill and S. M. Smith called, who upon a careful examination of the injured member, decided that amputation would be necessary, which accordingly was done, the right arm being amputated a short distance above the elbow. Mr. Curtin is a married man and resides with his family at East Tyrone. He was removed to his house shortly after the surgical operation was performed, where he has been resting as easily as could be expected under the circumstances. It is the opinion of the surgeons that he should have been taken to the hospital at Altoona. He has been employed as a brakeman in the Tyrone yard for about four months.

WHAT AUGUST SHOWS.

Dull Month With Increased Business at the Bellefonte Post Office.

During the month of August busines of post offices generally is pretty dull, it being considered one of the dullest months of the year. So far as Bellefonte is concerned the business was far in excess of July, both in amount of mail matter handled by the carriers as well as the sale of postage stamps, etc. People would hardly believe that so much mail matter is handled by the four carriers. Following are the figures as taken from the report sent to the post office department for the month of August:

Registered letters delivered	58
Letters	20,450
Postal cards	3,850
2nd, 3rd & 4th class matter delivered	15,140
Local letters collected	483
Mail letters collected	13,583
Local postal cards	306
Mail	1,854
2nd, 3rd & 4th class matter collected	1 743
Total number of pieces handled by carriers	57,437.

This is an increase of nearly ten thousand pieces over the number of pieces during the month of July.

Scrofula All His Life.

I consider my cure by S S S one of the most wonderful on record. I had the worst type of scrofula from my infancy until I was 22 years of age. My whole young life was embittered and made miserable by the loathsome disease. I not only suffered from the scrofula, but was so marked that I was ashamed to associate with, and was avoided by my playmates and fellow workmen. I tried every known patent medicine, and was first and last attended by more than a dozen reputable physicians, but in spite of all, the disease continued to grow worse. About four years ago a friend from Pittsburg advised me to take S S S, which I did, and after taking seven bottles I was cured sound and well. The old skin peeled off and was replaced by a new skin, as smooth and free from blemish as any person. I have had no return or symptom of the disease.

An Upheaval Among the Miners.

Owing to the unsatisfactory result of the miner's conference held in Altoona recently, it is claimed that considerable dissatisfaction prevails throughout the Clearfield region. The following dispatch, relating thereto, was sent out from Philipsburg Thursday evening:

"It is very probable that the miners of Central Pennsylvania, about 15,000 in number, will go on a strike on the 13th of September. At the convention of delegates from the miners at Altoona, last Tuesday, a scale for dead work was drawn up, taking in parts of the Houtzdale and Philipsburg scales. The scale asks for many important changes, among hem being that boys aged 12 years entering a mine shall receive a half turn until 16 years old; over that age full turn. Parents must prove the age of their boys. After the 1st of October all coal shall be weighed according to the law, or 2,000 pounds to the ton. Coal is weighed at present with a 2,240 pound standard. The scale is to be advanced in proportion to any advance in the prices of mining; all coal shall be paid for at the rate of 50 cents; $2 a day to be paid for all dead work not mentioned; $1 to be paid for headings 10 feet wide, for turning rooms; cars pushed in or out by miners to cost 5 cents extra, and when the distance exceeds 60 yards 5 cents more. Where coal is loaded after a coal cutting machine 35 cents per ton must be paid; all miners must enforce the law as to taking out water.

On Wednesday the delegates and operators met, but no action was taken. The scale has been sent to all operators, and another conference will be held at Altoona on the 10th of September. Many operators ridicule the idea of granting the scale.

Central Pennsylvania has been the scene of many miners' strikes in which the men were generally defeated. They have been working for two years, however, and are now finely organized and in good shape to make a strong fight. They will strike on the 15th of September at all pits where the new scale is not signed."

—Our fellow townsman, Mr. W. T. Twitmire, has invented a mail box for papers and packages. He has manufactured one and on Friday it was on exhibition up on the pavement in front of the court house It is modeled very much after the letter boxes up around town only it is fully three feet high and over a foot in width. It is made of zinc supported with heavy iron bands. It might be a convenience for the postoffice department to put up several of these boxes in various parts of the town.

They Were All There.

In the personal column of Friday's Philadelphia Press appeared the following:

"I'll wager what you please it's Joe Jefferson," said a slim youth of the know-it-all species to his companion, as the twain looked in from Broad Street to the Stratford parlor, where a gray-haired old gentleman was talking to two ladies who showed by their countenances that his conversation was more than usually entertaining. The slim youth's companion considerately limited the wager to a small bottle. An appeal to the clerk resulted in the confusion of the know-it-all young man. The old gentleman with the animated face was A. G. Curtin, who, with Mrs. Curtin, is on his way from Saratoga to their home in Bellefonte. He received a host of callers yesterday.

Another somewhat well-known Bellefonte gentleman at the Stratford is Gen Hastings, who arrived Tuesday evening without registering.

Grapes for Health.

The use of ripe grapes for dinner is of incalculable benefit to the human system, and the Pure Grape Juice, properly preserved, is invaluable for weakly persons and invalids. The Port Grape Wine and the Grape Juice preserved from his own vineyards, by Alfred Speer of New Jersey, is pronounced by the leading medical experts to be the most reliable to be obtained. To use the Unfermented Grape Juice is just like eating the ripe sweet grape.

—All credit to the ladies of the W. C T. U. They have succeeded in having the fountain in the Diamond repainted. From the dirty green, which never seemed consistent, the base has now been painted a dark brown and the angel white. This latter is very real like, but is there not some danger of it frightening some night travelers out of their wits? Suppose a man should come along there some real dark night and, not having noticed it previously, look that way. Might he not think he saw a ghost? All the same the fresh paint is a decided improvement.

Why It Is Popular.

Because it has proven its absolute merit over and over again, because it has an unequalled record of cures, because its business is conducted in a thoroughly honest manner, and because it combines economy and strength, being the only medicine of which "100 Doses One Dollar" is true—these strong points have made Hood's Sarsaparilla the most successful medicine of the day.

Forty Five Dollars In It.

The following from the Tyrone Herald will be of unusual interest to our local wheelmen as it will clearly demonstrate the rights of a bicyclist, and also make plain the urgent necessity of joining the State organization of American Wheelmen:

"A short time ago one of our bicyclists while taking a morning ride was run down by two men with a horse and buggy, and suffered some light personal injuries and considerable damage to his wheel. The Local Consul of the League of American Wheelmen, for this place, promptly reported the circumstance to Samuel A. Boyle, Esq., Assistant District Attorney of Philadelphia and Chief Consul Pennsylvania Division L. A. W., and was by him instructed to bring suit immediately against the offenders, under the auspices of the L A W. The matter was placed in the hands of Messrs. Stevens & Owens, who settled the case yesterday. The offenders made amicable settlement, in preference to standing criminal and civil prosecution, by paying the amount of damages sustained, all costs, and attorney's fees, the amount in full being $45.

This should be a warning to the many persons wheelmen meet on the road, who seem to think that a bicycle is an outlawed machine and that a bicyclist has no rights of the road to be respected. It is well for all such persons to note that the rider of a bicycle enjoys by law, the same rights and privileges that drivers of other vehicles do. The League of American Wheelmen is an immence organization, its membership reaching nearly 20,000. throughout the United States. Its object is to promote the interests of wheelmen, to secure them rights and protection, and to labor in behalf of the improvement of our highways, and its prompt action in this case cannot but help to win it friends among all those who favor equal rights."

The Best Advertising.

The most efficient advertising in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla is that which comes from the medicine itself. That is, those who are cured by it, speak to friends suffering similarly, who in turn derive benefit and urge others to try this successful medicine. Thus the circle of its popularity is rapidly widening from this cause alone, and more and more are becoming enthusiastic in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla as it actually demonstrates its absolute merit. All that is asked for Hood's Sarsaparilla is that it be given a fair trial. If you need a good blood purifier, or building up medicine, try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

After diphtheria, scarlet fever, pneumonia, or any other severe illness, there is no better tonic than Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Take Care, There is Danger

In allowing inactivity of the kidneys to grow through neglect. The deadly shoals of Bright's disease and diabetes will wreck the goodly bark of health if it is allowed to drift rudderless upon them. The bladder too, if inactive, and judicious medication does not speedily direct the helm toward the port of safety, will be whelmed by the quicksand of disease. In selecting a diuretic, let your choice fall upon Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which stimulates the renal organs without irretating and exciting them, two effects to be apprehended from the unmedicated stimuli largely resorted to. These have a tendency to react prejudicially. The Bitters invigorate the kidneys and bladder, in common with the nerves and digestive organs and so afford lasting aid. It also affords dual assistance in preventing and curing intermittent and remittent fever. Billiousness constipation and rhuematism it also subjugates. tf.

Put on the Brakes.

If you find you are going down hill in point of health. Failing strength, impaired digestion and assimilation are the marks of decline. Check these and other indications of premature decay with the grand vitalizer and restraining tonic, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Beginning at the fountain head, the stomach, the Bitters remedies its inefficiency, corrects its errors, and sets it vigorously at work. The digestive organ is thus enabled to thoroughly separate from the food its nutritive principles, which the blood assimilating, is enriched. Thus is the system nourished, and being nourished, strengthened, and abnormal waste of its tissues stayed. Appetite, the power to rest well, a regular habit are also reestablished, and the various functions move once more in their natural and healthful groove. The Bitters, moreover, is a specific cure for and preventive of malarial complaints, rheumatism, billiousness and kidney troubles.

A Wonder.

It is really wonderful, how many individuals permit themselves to be bcodwinked by quack medicines and compounds of all kinds. A sure cure for nearly all diseases that flesh is heir to, are the oft spoken words on each bottle of this trash. Doctors of repute who have spent their days, and nights too, in their studies to learn if possible any new thing to prolong life, and to make life more enjoyable, have no hesitancy in recommending Klein's Silver Age Rye. Mr. Klein does not claim that it cures all ailments; but it is considered by all who know the goods; that it is a fine stimulant; that it is used in City Hospitals; that Physicians recommend it; nay prescribe it, and that it strengthens the weak. It is also admitted by all who know Mr. Max Klein that his many years in business have fitted him not only to deal fairly with the world, but made him the leader of his line in our state. His Pennsylvania Rye Whiskies, 6 full quarts, old and pure at five dollars are the wonders of the day. Killed by the Cars.

A fearful and fatal accident occurred on Saturday night about 9 o'clock, just below Ferguson's crossing on the lower yard of the P. & E. railroad here, by which Frank DeVictor, who lived below the water tank in Wayne township, lost his life. The fast line, going west, was a little late and it appears that the unfortunate man was sitting on the end of a tie when the locomotive struck him tearing the whole top of his head off The body was found by two men, Messrs. Craven and Poorman, lying at the place mentioned, and was brought to Sloan's undertaking establishment here and prepared for burial. Yesterday afternoon Coroner Mader empaneled the following jury: J M Dauer, Peter Bender, William McCollum, George V Rathgeber, Hayes Sloan and James Gibb, who viewed the body and then adjourned until 2 o'clock this afternoon, the remains in the meantime being sent home. Mr. DeVictor was about 30 years old and has a wife and four children. He was a painter by trade.—L. H. Democrat.

New Lutheran Church.

On the fourth of August at a joint meeting of the building committee and church council of the Lutheran congregation of this place, the contract for the entire brick work of the new Lutheran church on corner of Linn and Allegheny streets, was awarded to William Wolf, a first-class brick layer, at his bid, but afterward for some unknown reason, he declined to accept. At the same meeting the slating was awarded to the Union Roofing Company. The contract for the lumber, doors and window frames—including sash, to P. B. Crider & Son.

At a subsequent joint meeting the contract for the entire brick work was again awarded to Thomas R. Zeigler, of Rebersburg, but on account of the delay caused by the non-acceptance of Mr Wolf, and as Mr. Zeigler would have to manufacture the brick (having none on hand) it was determined to get everything in readiness to start next Spring. There was no hitch on the money question in determining the delay. Although more money will be needed than they now have yet they have received substantial encouragement that it will be forthcoming when actually needad. The above information was furnished us by the Secretary and is correct.

CAPE MAY GOSSIP.

Special Correspondence.

Cape May Point, Aug. 28, 1890.

President Harrison's arrival here las Wednesday afternoon, was the most important event of the week. It was not only a significant happening in the sense of a distinguished person's coming, but it was the day upon which the President attained his fifty seventh year. Consequently everybody was more than usually anxious to see the President and clasp him by the hand. Upon his arrival at the railway station at Cape May, quite a crowd of patriotic citizens gathered around the private car in which he was seated and pushed forward to take him by the hand.

The president yielded to the wishes of the people with apparent pleasure, and during the two or three minutes the car remained at the platform, he was kept busy dividing his attention between those anxious to greet him and the illustrious baby McKee, who had come over from the Point with Mrs. Harrison to meet him.

The President was delighted to see his grandson and the boy hugged and kissed his grandfather in the most affectionate manner possible; nor would he allow anyone to take him from the President's arms during the short ride over to the Point, Upon the Presidents arrival at the Shoreham Station, he was met by the Presidential carriage which conveyed him with little ceremony to his cottage. Here His Excellency announced that he was very weary from his long ride from Washington, and gave instructions to his servants that he would be reluctantly compelled to excuse himself to all callers.

The public, for some inexplicable reason, had inferred that extra preparations had been made at the cottage for the reception of guests during the evening, and little knots of inquisitive people hung around the house until a ate hour, being eager to miss nothing in the way of a public demonstration. The loungers about the grounds, however, were doomed to disappointment. The President partook of an old-fashioned family dinner, and thoroughly enjoyed being surrounded by no one but members of his own household. Baby McKee and his sister, Mary Lodge McKee, were accorded a place at the table out of deference to the occasion, but, beyond that trifling departure, the President participated of his anniversary dinner pretty much in the same style as a newspaper man would do under similar circumstances.

During the progress of the meal it was noticed that the servants had neglected to close the blinds, and that a crowd of curious individuals had collected outside and were watching every movement the President made at the table. Orders were at once issued by Mrs. Harrison to shut the screens, after which proceeding the first family of the United States ate its dinner in peace and without fear of criticism or molestation.

Immediately after dinner the President sought the private sitting room, and, although there were several callers, who came to extend their congratulations, he passed the entire evening with his family.

A handsomely bound book was sent to the President during the early part of the evening by Mr. George H. Stuart Jr., of Philadelphia, as a memento of the President's anniversary. A number of other presents were received at the cottage from various points in the United States, but the time passed with his family seemed to be more enjoyed than all the presents combined. Not that the President did not appreciate the gifts, but because he loves the quiet and seclusion of home.

The uncomplimentary remarks recently printed about the Point in a New York democratic paper, were nothing more nor less than the effusion of an impaired imagination. The same journal has been in an exceedingly bad humor, because the President and his family preferred the Point to Long Branch as a summer home, and whenever an imagined opportunity presents it assails the Point and its environments with a frenzy bordering on insanity, thus giving the place a great deal of gratuitious advertising.

Mr, A. H. Hamilton the genial proprietor of the hotel kindly placed his house and orchestra at Miss Varena's disposal, and showed her many other courtesies without once thinking of making a charge. Mr. Hamilton is constantly displaying similar liberality, and his broad-guaged ideas are certainly redounding to the benefit of the place. This has been a most successful season, and now the new Shoreham Hotel which was erected on a sort of experimental basis, has for several weeks passed, had all the business it could properly handle.

Fietta Weaver, She Ought to be Pardoned

We think the case of this woman, now incarcerated in the penitentiary, for killing her father in law, Andrew Weaver, should receive some attention. Every one who heard the evidence, when the trial was held, saw that it was a clear case of self defense, but, unfortunately for the woman, that plea was not set up, and she was found guilty under the indictment, declaring upon oath that she did not stab the old man Weaver. The verdict of guilty was found upon questionable evidence against her—and on the commonwealth's side would have proven an undoubted case of self defense resulting in her acquittal without any defense on her side. But the woman was poor and ignorant, and her natural thought was that a denial of having done the stabbing was her only plan to escape conviction, when a plea of self defense would have resulted in her acquittal.

His honor Judge Furst, in passing sentence upon the woman, indicated clearly that in a plea of self defense Mrs. Weaver would have gone free. But Judge Furst could not do other than pass sentence upon the woman after the jury brought in its verdict of guilty under the indictment. The Judge, in his sentence told the woman that if in the future the opportunity presented itself he would interest himself in her pardon—and these remarks of Judge Furst received the commendation of all, because every impartial listener at the trial felt that his Honor was only displaying his humane nature, and that it was a case in which the pardon board would have to be applied to for a remedy. Let Fietta Weaver be pardoned—she has been in the penitentiary long enough; the evidence on the side of the commonwealth established quite plainly that if she did stab Andrew Weaver, it was done purely in self defense.—Centre Reporter.

Never tell vulgar stories on the street. It is the height of boarishness.

SHE WAS PREPARED AND HE MOVED ON.

A woman opened a front door, and addressing a soiled man who, down on all fours, was seemingly looking for something, said:

'What are you doing there?'

'Madam,' he said, straightening up, 'please be so generous as to pardon this apparent intrusion. My little girl and I were coming along here just now, and the child, in her gay frolicsomeness, ran across your greensward, but in her glad forgetfulness dropped a silver dollar that had been given her by the handsomest and noblest of women. We were on our way to get a doll for my other little girl that is sick in bed, and it would have done your heart good to have seen the happiness of the little would-be purchaser—but she lost the money, and now, almost heartbroken, she has gone home to tell her mother of the great calamity.'

'That was indeed too bad said the woman.

'Yes, madam and if I could only hope—have you any little children, madam?"

'Yes.'

'Then yoos tknow what disappointment meanu a child. If I only knew where I could borrow a dollar, how inexpressably happy I should be. Madam could you let me have a dollar?'

'No; not this morning.'

'Well, could you let me have 50 cents ow, and give me the other half this fter noon?'

'N , I can't do that either.'

'Well, madam, may I ask what you are prepared to do?'

I am prepared to tell you to move on away or I'll send for a policeman.'

'You are thoroughly prepared for this, are you?'

'I am.'

'All right; I shall bid you good morning. It is one of my business rules never to tamper with any one that is thoroughly prepared.'

Pianos - Organs.

The improved method of fastening strings of Pianos, invented by us, is one of the most important improvements ever made, making the instrument more richly musical in tone, more durable, and less liable to get out of tune.

Both the Mason & Hamlin Organs and Pianos excel chiefly in that which is the chief excellence in any musical instrument, quality of tone. Other things, though important, are much less so than this. An instrument with unmusical tones cannot be good. Illustrated catalogues of new styles, introduced this season, sent free.

The Fourth Finger.

It is generally known that the fourth or ring finger of the human hand is not on a par with the other fingers, it being the weakest, the least flexible and the most rebellious in action. Scientific men explain this feebleness by the theory that the lateral tendons joining the ring finger to the others composing the hand in a measure paralyze it movements. To the majority of people it matters little that one of the fingers should be inferior to the rest in strength; as a scientific oddity, however, it is worthy of note; to the pianist or the player of stringed instruments it is a source of considerable inconvenience. As art can in the present day remedy most defects which inconmode us, a medical man has thought that something could be done to free the ring finger. He informs those interested in the matter that if they wish to have a strong, flexible fourth finger they have but to submit to a surgical operation, which consists in dividing the tendons of the hand. The operation, which is very simple, scarcely deserving of the name, has recently been performed on several New York, Boston and Brooklyn pianists.

COURT CULLINGS.

What has Been Done—Several Unimportant Cases Tried—Good Report of the Grand Jury.

Immediately upon the convening of court on Wednesday afternoon the Register of Centre county, John A Rupp, offered his accounts for confirmation.

The first case called was that of the Commonwealth against Samuel Watkins, of Curtin township, charged with horse stealing. This is the second time that Watkins has appeared in Centre county courts on the same charges. After hearing the evidence offered by the Commonwealth the defence changed their plea to that of "guilty." Dale made a speech in behalf of the prisoner claiming that he was not responsible, mentally, for what he had done. Prisoner was given a chance to speak in his own behalf. He said he was given permission by Burd Butler to take his father's horse to go for his clothes to Mill Hall, and it was while there that he got with some companions and become intoxicated While in that condition it was that he did the horse trading and selling. The court suspended sentence until the defence would have an opportunity to prove his story by summoning Burd Butler to appear in court, and if his story should prove correct it would greatly modify the sentence of the court if it was not correct it would also modify (?) the sentence.

The next case was the Commonwealth. vs. B P Schwartz, for assault and battery; After the selection of a jury the plea of "not guilty" was changed to that of "guilty." The attorneys for the Commonwealth asked that in this case sentence be suspended, which was done on the condition that defendant keeps the peace and pays all cost. In the case of the assault on C C Nestlerode, which he had committed the court sentenced prisoner to a fine of $35, costs of prosecution and to stand committed until the sentence is complied with. In two other cases, which Schwartz was the prosecutor, the grand jury ignored the bills and put the cost on the plaintiff. The sentence of the court on these indictments was that he stand committed until the costs were paid.

The next case called was the Commonwealth vs. Allan Cross, charged with malicious mischief. Allan Cross is a son of James Cross, of Stormstown, and was charged by H M Dunning with tearing down his fences and destroying the covering on his well. The case was tried before a jury which, after a short deliberation, returned a verdict of not guilty

Com. vs. William McGintey, for larceny, the defendant plead guilty, but is not yet sentenced.

Com. vs. J H Eshridge and Frank Cardon, accused of killing fish with explosives. Grand jury ignored the bill and put the costs on the county.

Com. vs. William Carson, for larceny Tried, but not found guilty.

Com. vs. Anna Welsh, charged with adultery. Plead guilty and sentenced by the court to pay a fine of $100, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the county jail for a period of twelve months; and to stand committed until the sentence is complied with.

REPORT OF THE GRAND JURY.

To the Honorable, the Judges of Quarter Sessions of the Peace, in and for the County of Centre—August Sessions, 1890:—

The Grand Inquest of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, inquiring for the county of Centre, in all matters relating to the same, do respectfully report:

That we have visited and inspected the county buildings and find the jail and jail yard in a satisfactory condition.

We would recommend the removal of the iron fence from the front of the court house yard, but not the fence on the stone wall running around the rear of the court house.

After having made a careful and full examination of the several county offices, vaults, court room, jury room, etc., we find the vaults becoming very much crowded with records, etc., and very limited court and jury conveniences.

The Grand Inquest begs leave to recommend the erection of a new addition o be placed in front of the present building, of sufficient size and capacity to afford ample court, office and vault facilities.

We would further recommend that the court house yard be properly covered with a pavement similar to the walks through the yard, with large rings around the trees to admit rain and moisture to prevent damage to the trees.

We would further recommend that better facilities be afforded the janitor for ringing the bell.

J. A. McCLAIN, Foreman.

Bellefonte, Pa., Aug. 27, '90.

The court thanked the grand jury for their thoughtfulness in calling attention to and recommending additions to the court house, offices, vaults, etc., and the improvement of the public grounds without having first had their attention called to it. He also said that the Court, would serve proper and due notice on the county commissioners as to the findings of the grand inquest and would use its influence to further the recommendations offered.

The Court also thanked the Jury for the able manner in which it had performed its duty and complimented the men by saying that never in all his judicial experience had he met with a jury that performed their work so well or so promptly. They were then discharged from further attendance upon this term of court.

THURSDAY MORNING SESSION.

On the opening of court this morning B E Butler's testimony in the Watkins' horse stealing case was heard and he denied having given permission at any time to Samuel Watkins to take a horse.

The jury in the case of Commonwealth against Allan Cross returned a verdict of "not guilty" and the costs to be divided between the prosecutor and the defendant.

The case of the Com. vs. W L Hayden charged with disturbing a religious meeting was called on Wednesday evening District Attorney Meyer opened the case to the jury when court adjourned until this morning. The charge against Mr. Hayden was based on the fact that on the 10th of August said defendant had entered the Disciple church at Howard and had attempted to read a paper during the regular day services, and against the wishes of the rulers of the church. Mr. Hayden was placed under arrest and is now on trial to answer to the above charge.

W R Gardner was the first witness called and he testified, in substance, as follows:

On Sunday, the 10th of August, W L Hayden, Sheriff Cooke and others entered the church, and, after the Sunday school, and while the table was being set for communion, W L Hayden arose and said he had a paper he wanted to read. He was notified by the Elders not to read the paper. The Elders have the power to control the church and its meetings. Witness told Sheriff Cooke he could read a paper if he had one, but he had none. Witness went and got a warrant and after the services Mr. Hayden again attempted to read his paper, under protest, when he was arrested. He went before the Justice of the peace and gave bail. Parties that came with Mr. Hayden refused to go out unless dragged out but when their names were being taken for the purpose of procuring warrants for the arrest of all parties they departed. The disturbance amounted to a delay in the services and the annoyance of a general hubbub. Witness stated that a resolution had been passed forebidding Mr. Hayden from speaking in that church.

T J Moore was called and testified that he was present on the Sabbath in question when Mr. Hayden attempted to read the paper. He made two attempts to do so when a warrant was obtained and Mr. Hayden placed under arrest. The attempt to read the paper caused considerable confusion—wrangling. etc Before the arrival of Mr. Hayden and his party there was no confusion. On cross-examination witness said there was nothing going on when defendant first attempted to read his paper. Did hear Mr. Leathers call Mr. Hayden a liar.

R C Leathers, one of the elders, from Mt. Eagle, was called. He testified to having been elected an elder, by the congregation, about seven years ago When Hayden attempted to read his paper I told him not to read his paper as the church had passed resolutions forbidding it. Two hymns were sung, meanwhile I expostulated with the defendant but he was determined to read it. We were obliged to sing to keep him from reading. Finally I told Mr. Headley to go on with his sermon, which he did. At this time all was quiet. After the benediction another attempt was made to read the paper when Mr. Hayden was placed under arrest.

Cross—Ex. The resolution forbidding Mr. Hayden speaking in the church was passed because Mr. Hayden had been annoying our church previously and was considered detrimental to the growth and good of the church. Mr. Hayden first called me a liar and I then told him that he was the liar. Did not say to defendant that he had better go and strike his sister, but did say that I had never struck my sister.

Robert Cooke called. I went with Mr. Hayden to Howard. He said that there had been trouble in that church and if there was any trouble that day he wanted me to be there to stop it. Mr. Hayden said he had a paper deposing the present board of elders and putting in a new board. That if he could read the paper they could get possession of the church.

H. L. Harvey was the next witness called. Mr. Harvey's principal examination tended to explain the governments and workings of the church. Also that he had been on intimate terms with the defendant in this case; and that said defendant had made a proposition, or presented a request, to witness that he resign his position as a member of the board of trustees and an elder in said church, and that the witness had agreed to do so if given about ten days notice. Such notice, however, had never been given, and therefore witness was still a church officer.

The Commonwealth then offered portions of the church record in evidence which was accepted, and with this the Commonwealth rested. Court adjourned until 2 p. m.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Defence was opened by counsel Reeder reading the portions of church record offered in evidence by the Commonwealth, which consisted chiefly of resolutions condemning the actions of the defendants and the old board of church officers.

W. L. Hayden called. Reside in Bellefonte. Have been a minister of the Disciple church for 29 years. Am a State Evangelist of the Central Pennsylvania Conference. Have preached at Howard ten times. Went there over a year ago to fix up the disturbance that has been in that church for years. Told them it could only be fixed up by burying the entire affair. A paper was drawn up and signed by 41 members. Witness then gave a full account of all the trouble up to the time when a conference was held in the beginning of June, when a decision was rendered calling a congregational meeting to be held on the 25th of June. The meeting assembled but, the church being locked and the assemblage being notified not to break open the door at their peril, chairs and tables were secured and the meeting held, at which resolutions were adopted deposing the old board of trustees and electing a new board and placing the Howard church under the supervision of a contingent of the churches of Lock Haven and Williamsport until such time as it should be able to take care of itself. The resolutions and minutes of that meeting are on the church record. It was to make a report of the result of a conference, held between the elders of the Lock Haven and Williamsport churches, to try R C Leathers for a personal attack on his brother John. When I arose 5 minutes before 10.30, the time of opening the service, and said I had an announcement to make. I was at once told that I could not read it, but I proceeded to do so, when Mr. Leathers gave out a hymn and commenced to sing. Mr. L. then spoke to me [witness uses very violent language as the same that Mr. Leathers had used in which he was called a liar etc.] They sang two or three hymns then commenced the regular services. After the benediction was pronounced Mr. Stout attempted to read the paper when the constable stepped up and arrested me. I asked him to read his warrant. He read it Wm. L. Hayden. I told him that wasn't my name. I have a brother by that name, he being a preacher too, I did not wish to get him mixed up in this scrape. The warrant was changed and then I went to the 'Squires and gave bail for my appearance at court. When I got back the church was locked—and I didn't go in. The Howard church is recognized as a branch of the regular church, which regular church has jurisdiction in and over all churches The paper I went there to read was a proclamation.

On cross examination Mr. Hayden quoted and read more scripture and discussed a greater quantity of theological doctrine than has probably ever before been heard in a court house. The difference between progressionists and old time Disciples was discussed. Witness stated that he took the Sheriff with him because he thought he might need protection. I wanted to read the paper for instruction to the other party. I asked the congregation to remain because I wanted to read the paper. I was in as pleasant a frame of mind then as I am now [By Spangler—"You had better soon commence to smile then, as you haven't smiled once since you have been on the stand." Witness smiles.]

Defence offers five papers in evidence. Admitted.

M P Ryan, of Williamsport called. Witness simply substantiated the foregoing statements of Mr. Hayden.

J Z Long was called and stated that he arrived at the Disciple church in Howard on the day in question about 10.25—five minutes before the regular time for opening service. Mr. Hayden was on the floor trying to read a paper, the congregation was singing and R C Leathers was expostulating with Mr. Hayden After service Hayden again attempted to read his paper when he was arrested. I do not think the church service was at all disturbed by Mr. Hayden.

On cross—ex. Mr. Long stated that he had aided and abetted Mr. Hayden to the extent of going his bail for his appearance at court, when he was arrested,

Three other witnesses were called but their testimony was simply corroborative of the above. The defence said they had thirteen other witnesses but as their evidence amounted to the same thing they would waive their examination if the court so ruled. It was so ruled and then the defence rested.

There was no evidence of any consequence offered in rebuttal. Twenty minutes were given each side for their plea to the jury. J G Love summed up for the defence and J L Spangler for the prosecution. The Judge delivered his charge at the conclusion of which he told the jury that under the evidence they could not convict Mr. Hayden and therefore, the whole thing was simply a matter of costs. The jury retired at 5.35 to decide on that point only, when court adjourned until Friday morning.

FRIDAY MORNING SESSION.

The jury in the case of the Commonwealth against W L Hayden returned a verdict of "not guilty" and the costs of suit to be paid by the prosecutors. A little difference here arose between opposing counsel as to whether the jury meant "costs of suit," as the verdict was recorded, or whether they meant only the "costs of prosecution." The difference is very material and the verdict as recorded is universally thought to be unjust.

The court then made a poll of the criminal list and it was found that all the cases had been disposed of. After directing the Sheriff to have all convicted persons in court at 2 o'clock this afternoon to receive sentence, the case on the civil list of R B Matley & wife vs. R E Munson was taken up.

Sentences Imposed.

On Friday afternoon at 2. o'clock all persons convicted and not previously sentenced were brought into court by the Sheriff and the following sentences imposed by the court.

William Reed, who plead guilty to the charge of furnishing intoxicating liquors to persons of known intemperate habits, was sentenced to pay a fine of $50, costs of prosecution, to undergo imprisonment in the county jail for a period of 60 days and to stand committed until the sentence is complied with.

Calvin Miller (colored), who plead guilty to the charge of fornication and bastardy, was sentenced to pay a fine of $100, costs of prosecution and to stand committed until the sentence is compiled with.

Annie Hockenbury, charged with larceny and who plead guilty, was sentenced to pay a fine $1, costs of prosecution, undergo imprisonment for a period of 6 months and to stand committed until the sentence is complied with.

William McGinty (colored), convicted of larceny, was sentenced to pay a fine of $1, costs of prosecution, 6 months in the county jail and to stand committed until sentence is complied with.

Samuel Watkins, convicted of horse stealing, was sentenced to pay a fine of $1, costs of prosecution, to undergo imprisonment at separate and solitary confinement at hard labor in the Western Penitentiary for a period of 5 years, and to stand committed until the sentence was complied with.

Watkins is only the second man ever convicted of horse stealing in Centre county. The other was a man named Walker, who was convicted under Judge Orvis and sentenced by him to 10 years imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary. It seems that horse stealing stands next to murder in the list of criminal cases in the east; in the west it is first on the list.

TWO VERDICTS.

On the civil list two cases were tried before a jury on Friday. One was the case of R. B. Matley & Wife against R. E. Munson to recover the value of a certain calf claimed by the plaintiff and which the defendant had claimed as his own. Judgment was awarded the plaintiff in the sum of $19.50.

In the case of Auman against Stamm, an action to recover balance due on a written contract, a verdict was awarded the plaintiff giving judgment for the entire amount with interest in full to date amounting to $108 and some few cents. With these two cases court adjourned until next week.

—The eleventh annual convention of the Pennsylvania State Firemen's Association, to be held at Chester, on Sept. ember 16, 17, 18 and 19, will, in all probability, be the largest gathering of firemen since the organization. The parade on the 18th of September will be a grand sight, the Franklin, Hauley, Moyamensing and Felton companies will have fully eight hundred equipped men in line. Eighty-eight companies have already signified their intention of being present on the occasion. Some of the finest bands in the State have been engaged.

—It is correctly observed by a contemporary that a backbiter will do a vast amount of injury in any community. Somehow there is a peculiar degree of boiled down wickedness about this class of people. They love to fabricate. They love to injure their neighbor. They are usually great cowards and always untruthful. One such mischievous busy body will do more harm in one day than an good men can undo in a month.—Ex.

Arrangements are being made, though not yet completed, to have a train come in over the Lemont railroad to intersect with the 5.30 train west at this place.

—In view of the prospective repairs that are to be made on the Academy buildings that will make that institution as worthy and attractive as any of a like order in the State, the parents of Bellefonte who contemplate having their children pursue a course of education at the Academy at any time will show great wisdom in starting their children at that school this fall that by the time the needed repairs have been made they may have received an impetus in Academical work.

WOMEN AND MICE.

The reason why a woman is afraid of a mouse is a profound mystery—indeed, it has never been very clearly proven that she is. But some women are constantly in such a nervous, irritable condition that the slightest thing annoys and startles them. The cause of this unfortunate state of affairs is usually some functional derangement; some distressing or painful irregularity, some derangement or peculiar weakness incident to her sex; or, it may be due to inflammation, ulceration or displacement, of some of the pelvic viscera, or to other organic lesions peculiar to her sex. From whichever cause it may arise, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive remedy, so certain in its curative results that its manufacturers sell it, through druggists, under a guarantee of its giving satisfaction in every case, or money paid for it will be promptly refunded. As a soothing and strengthening nervine, "Favorite Prescription" is unequaled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, exhaustion, prostration, hysteria, spasms and other distressing, nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the womb. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency.

The only true practical

ELIXIR OF LIFE AND HEALTH.

is one that promotes digestion, improves the appetite, cleanses the liver, purifies the blood, and stimulates brain and nerves without injurious reaction, and one that may be taken alike by adult or infant. Profane compounds, made of vile rum or bad whiskey, sweetened and flavored, under the titles of bitters, tonics, &c, produce effects far worse than the disease for which they are taken.

Vinegar Bitters is a pure tonic, a nervine without being narcotic, a purifier without poison, a liver tonic without purging, and above all, a life-giving stimulant without alcohol. The only medicine with such powers in the world.

A GENUINE TEMPERANCE BEVERAGE,

far surpassing alcohol in any shape as a tonic it might be called

since it stimulates, invigorates and regulates digestion, nutrition, secretion, excretion, respiration, and all the functions whereby life is maintained—we literally take in vitality in spoonfuls.

It is too much to assert that the equal of Vinegar Bitters does not exist, and no counterpart or compound with similar virtues has ever been known

CALIFORNIA,

if remarkable for nothing else, would be immortalized by the production of the medicinal fruits, roots and herbs of which this Bitters is composed. Many of them used by the Indians and the medical profession in the treatment of chills and fevers, rheumatism, catarrh, consumption, neuralgia, headaches, liver complaint, kidney disease, jaundice, gout, piles, boils, skin diseases, &c., &c., too numerous to mention, but easily understood when the action of the Bitters on the vital functions is remembered. The discovery was partly accidental but the present

PERFECT BITTERS IS THE RESULT OF SCIENCE.

Millions of sufferers have gratefully and gladly endorsed, during the past quarter of a century the wonderful success of this

PHENOMENAL TONIC OF THE WORLD.

In order to meet every probable demand, two formulas of the same ingredients are now put up.

THE OLD STYLE IS STRONGER, SLIGHTLY BITTER, AND MORE CATHARTIC.

THE NEW STYLE, PLEASANT TO THE TASTE, AND EXPRESSLY ADAPTED TO DELICATE WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

REMEMBER,

There is no disease of low vitality, debility of functions, or nervous prostration for which

VINEGAR BITTERS IS NOT CURATIVE, and its singular power over the lower organisms renders it the implacable foe of

THE DEADLY MICROBE AND OMNIPRESENT BACTERIA

in malarial diseases, cholera, consumption, internal diseases, &c., and so great is its power as a germicide that it is an

UNEQUALLED VERMIFUGE.

A book could be written of its virtues, and another of testimonials, but it is only necessary to remember its general action upon the liver, blood, brain and nerves, to realize its use in a majority of the ills that flesh is heir to, and that no family should ever be without a bottle of

—On the first day of September (Monday) the new law about boys smoking goes into effect. After this date, the law says "no child actually or apparent under 16 years of age shall smoke or in any way use a cigar or tobacco in any form whatever, in any public street, place or resort." Now let the boys who "appear to be" under 16 years of age look out. The penalty for violation of the law is not less than $2 nor more than $10 for each offense. The law provides also for punishing those who sell "tobacco in any form" to such youth. This law we believe was introduced by Senator Linson.

ANOTHER MURDER

HARRY WATERHOUSE SHOT DEAD BY AN

ENGLISHMAN From BRADDOCK

A Quarrel Without Provocation Ends in a Cold Blooded Murder.

About half past 3 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon Harry Waterhouse, aged about 46, was engaged in a quarrel by an Englishman who gave his name as "Billy," and who said he was from Braddock. Words lead to blows and the Englishman finally drew a large bull dog revolver and, before anyone could interfere, shot Waterhouse in the neck, from the effects of which he died in a half hour. The Englishman was arrested and is now in jail. There was really no cause for the shooting so far as Waterhouse was concerned but the Englishman had sworn previously that he would do Waterhouse up.

When "Billy" was arrested there was found on his person $14.29 in money and two large bull dog revolvers—one of 38 and the other 42 calibre. Both revolvers were full loaded, only the one shot having been fired. In addition other cartridges were found on his person. When taken to jail he feigned drunkenness.

Centre Baptist Association.

To-day the Centre Baptist Association meets in Tyrone. Following are the names of the delegates that went from Centre county:

Bellefonte—Rev T B Cross, Miss Ella Haupt, Miss Mary Adams.

Milesburg—H Heaton, Mrs Heaton, Miss S S Gibbs, Miss Gibbs, Miss Moore, Mrs O Peters, John Shank, Mrs Mary Shirk, Miss S Gregg, Miss Heaton.

Unionville—G Peters, H Hosband, Mrs Hosband, M Lucas, Miss N Lucas, D Blair, Miss Lydia Peters.

The delegates meet as representatives of a portion of a large denomination of christian workers, whose energies are devoted to the cause of Christ and truth. The Baptists have had an honorable share in the progress of events in the history of the nation. They have been sturdy maintainers of religious liberty and freedom of conscience ever since the days that they were whipped as disturbers of the established religious order of things in New England. The story of Roger Williams and Obadiah Holmes is not unknown to history.

From a small number they have grown with a greater growth than the Nation itself, until now the so called regular Baptists number 35,588 churches, 21,175 ministers and 3,070,047 members. The total number of those who are classed under the name of Baptists is according to the latest statistics, 4,202,291. The Independent in giving the religious statistics of the United States says: "The Baptists form a large family. The largest body called regular or particular Baptists, are generally Calvanistic in doctrine, practice close communion, and, in common with most other Baptists, are congregational in policy and reject infant baptism."

At present the Methodist Episcopal church stands at the head of the list of Protestant churches in numbers, having a total of 3,368,129; the entire family numbering 4,980,240. The Presbyterian family follows with a membership of 1,229,012; the Lutherans with 1,086,048; the Congregationalists with 491,985 the Episcopalians with 480,176. None of the other minor denominations number over 200,000.

In the State our Baptist friends number 79,174, and in the body which meets to-morrow there are represented twenty-eight churches with 2,221 members last year.

Weather for September.

Rev. Irl D. Hicks, the St. Louis meteorologist, sends out the following weather forecast for September. Cool nights, with probable touches of frost to the northward, will prevail in most parts at the opening of the month. From the 3rd to the 7th, storm conditions will develop and run their regular course from west to east. By the evening of the 5th or 6th these storm movements will have passed the central regions of the Mississippi valley, and a cool wave will follow. A dash of cool, northwest wind and weather will supplement each disturbed period in September. It will grow warm and threatening, with reactionary storms on and next to the 10th and 11th. From these reactionary days forward until we pass beyond the center of the earth's equinox, about the 22nd, general storms and gales may be looked for. From the 14th to the 17th we count danger days. Seafaring people failing to exercise a prudent watchfulness may pay a heavy penalty. From about the 19th very warm days may be expected in the west growing warmer and traveling eastward, with very active storms on sea, lake and land from the 20th to 23d. Note this period—be prepared for the sudden and perhaps severe developments it may bring, and do not be caught altogether unawares should a cold wave with frost and some early freezing follow in the days immediately behind the storm area. Earthquake phenomena at and about this time, also, need cause no surprise or alarm. From the 26th to 30th the elements will undergo the last storm movement of the month. We name the 27th, 28th and 29th as probable danger days.

The month bids fair to end in cool nights, with cold and frost to the northward, sufficient to justify proper watchfulness and preparation against damage to immature vegetation. In answer to numberless inquiries from all parts, we state here that we believe the early autumn will bring very cool weather, and that the coming winter will be much more severe than last. Such conclusion is only a part of deductions drawn and printed six years ago, call for the wet seasons and the mild winters through which we have passed, and for the change to dry warm summers and colder winters for at least three years, dating from the solstice in June, 1890.

GOV. CURTIN AT SARATOGA.

Much Improved in Health and Telling Stories as Usual.

A correspondent writing from Saratoga about a week ago said: "Friends of the "Old War Governor" of Pennsylvania, A. G. Curtin, will be glad to learn that the waters and the rest of Saratoga have brought him a better condition of health than he enjoyed last winter. I know of no more interesting talker than Gov. Curtin. We sat on one of the broad piazzas one morning after breakfast. He was dressed in a plain business suit, like a Pennsylvania country merchant, but his tall figure, as straight as an arrow, and his noble bearing would command attention anywhere, as they did here even from those who didn't know him. An ex-Confederate colonel, William A. Hayward, of South Carolina, joined us in conversation. Col. Hayward himself is a striking military figure, a man with a history. His strong, sweet Southern pronunciation contrasted strikingly with the vigorous English of the old Keystone Governor.

'There was a time,' said the latter, his keen eyes resting on the blue orbs of the sturdy Southerner, 'when the people of South Carolina would not have welcomed me down there.'

'But that time has long since passed, Governor,' quickly replied Colonel Hayward.

'Yes, happily. I have been there since. I was never better treated, more cordially received in my life than by your people. Wherever I went the hand of good fellowship was extended in a manner I shall never forget.'

'Brave men who did their duty as they understood it,' responded the gallant ex-Confederate, 'are the same everywhere. Among them there is no North and no South.'

'True, true. It reminds me of a scene I witnessed at Spotsylvania. Riding over the battlefield after that action I came across a wounded Pennsylvania soldier. He was leaning against a stump holding a bloody leg. I dismounted and asked him how he was."

'Is the bone broken?' I enquired as he explained his injury.

'No,' said he cheerfully, 'only a bullet through the flesh.' Still he was faint and thirsty.

'What would you rather have just now, my man?' said I—'if you had but one wish'—I was thinking of his home in the Pennsylvania hills.

'I would like to have a good drink of Pennsylvania whisky.' I replied, extending my flask. 'You shall have it.

'He took the flask, held it in his hand a second, then pointed to a dying Confederate soldier near by. 'Better give it to him, he said, 'he needs it more than I do, poor fellow. Yes, give it to him.

'We turned to the latter. For all we knew it might have been the very man who shot him. But we propped him up and attempted to pour some of the liquor down his parched throat. He heard every word and seemed to understand the situation thoroughly. It was too late. With a greatful look in his eyes as he turned them a moment on the Pennsylvania soldier, he sighed deeply and fell back dead.'

The old Governor relapsed into a silent retrospect for a brief space, as if he were recalling the scene upon the battle field. Then he continued:

'I have seen that Pennsylvania soldier since the war. He had nothing to begin life anew with. On the strength of that deed to an enemy at such a time I endorsed him for a sum of money. He prospered He now owns two mills and a couple of farms, and he deserves all he has.'

'He does, indeed!' exclaimed the Colnel, warmly. 'There is no war feeling now between such men.'

We then fell to discussing the existing relations between the North and South.

'The soundest relation between two peoples' said Governor Curtin, 'is the' commercial relation. It is the same way as between individuals. Men whose commercial relations are identical closest friends. Countries whose business relations are closely commingled are not in much danger of war with each other. The commercial bond between the north and south was very slight before the war—now it is strong, and it grows stronger every year.'

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The Centre Baptist Association Now in Session in Tyrone.

The twenty-fifth annual meeting of this body was opened at 9 30 o'clock Tuesday morning in the Baptist church of Tyrone. Devotional services were led by Rev. M. B. Lanning former pastor of the church, now at Everete, Bedford county. After Galatians, 6th chapter, was read and commented upon, further exercises were participated in by a number of the delegates. At 10 o'clock, R. W. Hudson, of Saltillo, President of the Convention, took the chair and the following committees were appointed: On nomination of officers H. H. Laher, Rev. C. H. Fitzwilliam and J. W. Stuart; on application of new schools for admission. D. S. Bagshaw, Rev. N. C. Naylor and Rev. J. I. Bradford. The usual courtesies of an invitation to a seat in the convention were extended to all christian workers. Reports from the schools then followed.

The report of committee to nominate officers was then adopted with the following result. President D S Bagshaw, of Huntingdon; Vice President, G B Bowers, of Altoona; Secretary, R McDivitt, of Huntingdon; Treasurer, S E Henry of Huntingdon.

The secretary was instructed to have the proceedings printed with the minutes of the association, also, to have programmes printed and distributed in advance of the next session.

In the absence of the appointee, T O Milliken, the topic: "Work for the Little Folks," was opened for discussion by Rev. N C Naylor, of Altoona. It was continued by Rev. Owen James, Rev. S F Forgens, Robert McDivitt, Mrs. N C Naylor, Rev. M B Laning, Miss Lizzie Hicks, S E Henry, Rev. J T Bradford and John Cryder.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The afternoon session has not progressed far enough as we go to press to give any reports of the discussions. It was opened at two o'clock with devotional meeting conducted by Rev. J T Bradford, and was very spirited.

Further reports from schools were received. The evening services will be held in the M. E church and will be devoted to woman's missionary work at home and abroad.

An address of more than usual interest may be expected from Mr. M. A. Ehlers, a representative of the Women's Baptist Society, of Chicago. She was on the field in active work and is an excellent speaker and filled with the spirit of the Master, went about doing good.

There are already one hundred and twenty delegates present and fifty more are expected to day.

We can truthfully say, The Marshall & Smith Organ speaks for itself. If placed on exhibition with instruments of other establishments, it would certainly do honor to its manufacturers.

FIDELES.

Councils' Doings.

Seven members of the borough council assembled around the table in the council chamber on Monday evening After the reading of the minutes Mr. Al Garman extended an invitation to council to attend the opening of the new opera house on Thursday evening, September 11th, in a body free. The invitation was accepted. The only thing Mr. Garman forgot to notice was as to how many bald head tickets it would require.

Street committee reported the fountain painted and the streets being cleaned and put in good shape; but they forgot all about the obstructions or nuisance on the pavements.

Water committee reported the leak in the spring closed and the entire system in good working order. Also that an investigation had been made regarding the running of the water out East High street, and the committee reported that it be done. An estimate of the entire cost placed it at $293. This would allow for a three inch pipe from Bishop to High and a two inch pipe on High.

Finance committee handed in the report of the borough treasurer showing the borough indebted to said official in the sum of $6,781.

According to the ordinance governing the same it became the duty of council to elect a Chief Marshall and two assistants. The Undines handed in the name of Al. Garman and the Logans the name of H. J. Jackson. The latter was unanimously elected Chief Marshall and Mr. Garman was unanimously elected First Assistant, while Mr. C. F. Richards was elected Second Assistant. REPUBLICAN STATE TICKET.

FOR GOVERNOR,
GEORGE WALLACE DELAMATER
Crawford County.

FOR LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
LOUIS A WATRES,
Of Lackawana County.

FOR SECRETARY OF INTERNAL AFFAIRS,
THOMAS J. STEWART,
Of Montgomery County.

DELAMATER IS COMING.

Will Visit General Hastings Next Week.

The Philadelphia Times in speaking of where Senator Delamater will speak in the near future says as follows:

Sunday, the seventh day of the month, will find the Senator in Bellefonte, Centre county, as the guest of General Daniel H. Hastings, his principal competitor for the Governor's nomination at Harrisburg. On Monday the Senator and the General will visit a number of the Republicans of Centre county, and both will be called upon some time during the day to make speeches, it being the first for the adjutant general since the convention. It is presumed that General Hastings will, in his address, define his position.

The Outlook for the County.

Each day the outlook for the success of the entire Republican ticket grows more promising. The candidates are all men in whom the entire party has the utmost confidence and for whom democrats can vote and will vote. From the Legislature down there is not a man on the entire ticket who has not proved himself, by his business relations with the public in other matters, to be a fit and able official for the office for which he is running.

More than that the record of the party during the past three years is such that it will stand the test of any investigation and openly speaks for the many benefits that have been given the voter and the tax payer by the Republican administration. This is a fact that cannot be gain sayed. And with the election of the full republican ticket this fall comes promise of continued release from overburdened taxation, the righteous use and distribution of the people's money, and an economy in the disbursements of the county funds that will assure a continuation of the present low rate of taxation, if not another decrease.

Now it is the duty of every republican to do his level best for the success of the entire ticket. See to it that no stone is left unturned to elect every man who has been nominated. The democrats have made their boast that they would regain a hold on the management of the county's affairs this fall and retain it for another score of years. Will you allow them to do it?

The Marshall & Smith Organ needs no other recommendation than to be once heard, and that will prove its musical powers without further inquiry.
